Nature's Balance
Getting Foreign Trade
Another Waldorf
A Boy's ...pring

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

IT IS DANGEROUS TO INTERFERE with nature's balance, one thing killing others, all kept in bounds.

Yakima County, Washington, offered a bounty to exterminate ...kes and coyls, and thousands were killed, to protect game birds and poultry.

Investigation by Government experts examining hawk and owl interiors found that the birds lived on snakes, grasshoppers, field mice and ground squirrels, all dangerous to man—especially the ground squirrel that spread bubonic plague.

Yakima has withdrawn the bounty.

Kill off coyotes and foxes and you encourage a plague of field mice and jack rabbits. Montana made that discovery. The wise plan is to destroy the objectionable creature by scientific means. Get rid of small vermin and the bigger nuisances will disappear.

How to get foreign trade is an important question for American manufacturers, especially automobile makers.

General Motors' plan is to buy up important European factories, continue their output and graft Chevrolet, Cadillac, etc., on the foreign plant. Ford, on the contrary, starts Ford plants from the ground up.

Newspaper publishers know that it is wise to buy a going concern. It diminishes "local resistance."

General Motors has bought the biggest automobile plant in Germany and is supposed to have secured another plant in Italy.

If Mr. Sloan, now in Europe, could get Morris in England and Citroen in France, he might have a formidable "General Motors of Europe."

New York's Waldorf-Astoria, soon to be torn down, will rise again, 60 stories high with 2000 rooms on Park ave. The building, planned by Schultze and Weaver, architects, will be built by Herbert L. Thompson Construction Co. It is proposed, ...ing the unique of all other hotel construction.

It is only fair to tell Mr. Boomhauer that the new hotel he is planned 60 stories high, should go higher than ...ericans like to sleep as high up as possible.

...s the wetter built the Ritz 29 stories high, on Park ...was by far the highest structure ever built for human habitation. Agents and builders said, gloomily, "You will have to rent the upper stories in the tower, the height will frighten tenants."

The top stories were rented first, before the building was finished, and at a new apartment rental of $11 a square foot.

The new Waldorf-Astoria and the Ritz Tower will look like bungalows compared with buildings already planned.

Dr. H. F. Clark, professor of education at the Teachers' College, says college education interferes with a boy's chance to earn a living. It sends him into professions overcrowded and robs him of "daring" necessary to success.

That will comfort parents unable to send boys or girls to college. The important thing for a human being is to think for himself and to take his mental mainspring unbroken into the world fight.

Any system of education, religious or society, that forbids youth to think for itself is a handicap.

At a meeting arranged by Thomas Lamont of Morgan and Co., Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, New York's health commissioner, started a drive on diphtheria.

Four-eight diphtheria prevention clinics were opened, and in two months diphtheria deaths had diminished by 32.3 per cent.

With use of antitoxin and the Schick test diphtheria might conceivably become as slight a menace as smallpox or leprosy. The main danger is that children when ill play with cats and other pets and send disease germs to other children.

There will be less disease among children when parents realize that a cunning baby with its face buried in a cat's or a dog's fur may have its face buried in disease germs.

Safe in Turkey, Trotsky writes what he thinks of Russia's government that turned him out.

Pravda, Russian official newspaper, says Trotsky is "a living political corpse and a living renegade." It says the London Express and other capitalistic papers "eagerly pay thousands for Trotsky's attacks on communism."

REBELS EVACUATE TORREON; BANDITS MASS ALONG BORDER

HINT GRAFT IN STREET WIDENING

Bank accounts of all the Boston City Councillors were summoned today by the Finance Commission in connection with the commission's investigation of the $2,000,000 Exchange st. widening.

Hearings on this investigation, it was revealed, are due to begin in the near future, but the exact date has not yet been determined upon.

Mention of the Exchange st. project cropped out during the ...ings held by the Finance Commission into the Sunday baseball scandal, when it was testified that a city councilor said the widening measure was held up "until they were ready."

Although this ... along remained unsupported, the Finance Commission let it be known that it would investigate, and inquiry has been going on quietly ever since.

Stabbed After Fight at Hollywood Party

Mallywood, Cal., March 11 (INS)—William Mahoney, 37, said to be a son of Police Inspector Patrick Mahoney of New York, was mysteriously stabbed today in the apartment of Lenore Connovn, former Ziegfeld Follies beauty, culminating in an all-night drinking party.

While Mahoney is seriously injured, he is not expected to die. No arrests have been made. The stabbing followed a fight.

Mexico City, March 11 (INS)—The rebel army under Gen. Escobar that occupied Torreon, on the Coahuila-Durango frontier, where a major battle had been expected, was reported today to have evacuated the city.

RUNAWAY TRUCK HITS 'L' TRAIN; 2 INJURED

Two persons were injured and scores of others were badly shaken up when a driverless automobile truck crashed into the front end of a two-car Boston Elevated train bound from Orient Heights to Maverick sq. in Bennington st., East Boston, today.

Harry S. Sidman of Campbell ave., Revere, and Fred Borsa of Bennington st., passengers in the car, were cut by flying glass and were treated at East Boston Relief Station.

Traffic was held up 35 minutes and hundreds of people walked to East Boston tunnel as a wrecking crew hauled the disabled car away.

The ...uck, according to witnesses, had been parked on Bennington st., and started to roll down the street.

At the corner of Marion st. it plunged into the crowded El train, smashing two windows. The impact threw several people to the floor of the car.

Slasher Cuts Coat of Woman at Mass

A "slasher" with a new field of operations was reported today to police by Mrs. Annie Johnson, 60, of East Fourth st., South Boston. She told police that while at 11:15 mass in the Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston, yesterday, she felt her coat touched by a man.

She forgot the incident until 10 hours later when she examined her seal coat and discovered three slashes, one in the back and two in the left sleeve.

NAVY MEN POISONED BY CHARLESTOWN RUM

The United States government, acting through officials at the Boston Navy Yard, was preparing today to take action toward forcing the wiping out of speakeasies in Charlestown, with special attention to those purveying poison liquor.

Boston police, while awaiting a report from the medical examiner today on the death of Michael Conley, Charlestown resident and reputed victim of bad liquor, admitted receiving caustic complaints from naval authorities regarding illness caused to enlisted men while on "shore leave."

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle disclosed that in connection with Conley's death the police were running down a clue that he was seen in an auto going in the direction of the Mystic river where his body was found.

The police theory is that Conley, who was a resident of Charlestown, became helplessly intoxicated and ill from poison rum consumed in a Charlestown speakeasy and that when he was dying or dead he was disposed of in the river.

Doyle said he had no report as yet from Medical Examiner George B. Magrath, but he admitted having learned that there were marks on Conley's body which may have come from rough handling or from striking against the piling of the wharf near which his body was found.

Judge Michael Sullivan of the Charlestown District Court reiterated his denial today of leaks in connection with the issuance of liquor raid warrants in his court.

As a result of the investigation of Conley's death, Police Capt. Michael Goff of the Charlestown division was alleged to have said there were such leaks, but Capt. Goff today denied making any such statement. Judge Sullivan explained that he personally did not issue warrant, except in rare cases, and he said he has full confidence in the integrity of the clerk, Mark E. Smith, who issues them.

Sidewalk Oil Fire Cracks Windows

Show windows were cracked and traffic halted at Roxbury Crossing today when a pool of gasoline caught fire on the sidewalk of Columbus ave.

A discarded match is believed to have started the flames, which spread several feet in the air until employes of a salesroom extinguished them with sand.

PROBE CHELSEA DEATH OF EX-DARTMOUTH STAR

Chelsea police were today investigating the death of Charles R. Freeman, 28, of Alfred rd., Arlington, a Dartmouth graduate and son of a Chelsea druggist, who was found unconscious on Winnisimmet st., that city.

Freeman, who had a wife and two children, was prone on the sidewalk in front of the Salvation Army headquarters, and was removed to the Chelsea Memorial Hospital by the police.

He died without regaining consciousness, having sustained a fractured skull, according to the hospital authorities.

Sergeant-Inspector Charles H. Twombley was assigned to the case, and an autopsy was to be performed by the medical examiner.

The dead man was the son of C. W. Freeman of Elm st., Everett, proprietor of one of the largest and best known drug stores in Chelsea, located in Bellingham sq., near City Hall.

He graduated from Dartmouth in 1921, having been president of his class, manager of the football team, president of clubs and a member of the Alpha Delta Fraternity.

His wife was Marjorie Cone of Babcock st., Brookline, daughter of a wealthy shoe manufacturer.

Two children were born to the couple, Marjorie, six, and Anne, two, the family making their home in Arlington.

MEXICAN REBELS FALL BACK AS CALLES' BIG ARMY ADVANCES

raider way toward the state of Sinaloa, where there is a rebel force under Gen. Roberto Cruz. This is believed to be the biggest of the insurgent armies. According to reports received at Chapultepec Castle, it consists of about 5000 men.

News of the evacuation of Torreon was followed by a report that Gen. Escobar's pioneer forces, led by Gen. Francisco Urbalejo, Yaqui Indian chief, who has fought numerous campaigns for Gen. Obregon, and Gen. Calles, had surrendered to the federals north of cacatecas without a fight.

Urbalejo's defection left the railroad line open for the government drive northward on both Durango and Torreon.

As Gen. Escobar began his retreat reinforcements were reported making to his aid. These reinforcements are led by Gen. Francisco Enriquez and comprise 3000 men. This force has already moved through Pulpit Pass, on the Sonora border, into the state of Chihuahua.

Many motor truck drivers are said to have been enlisted by the rebels on the Arizona line to help transport the troops.

The fall of Torreon had been foreseen by Gen. Calles even before news reached here of the rebel retreat.

Spurred by yesterday's bloodless victory at Canitas, the federal army led by the former President had moved swiftly across the State of Zacatecas to cover the 150 miles which separated it from the Conchullos city where the rebel forces were located.

Fall of Canitas to Gen. Calles yesterday was such as to startle even the most optimistic here. An aviator flying over the rebel lines reported he saw everywhere men waving white flags.

REBELS ARE DUPED

The aviator communicated with the federal vanguard which immediately established contact with the rebels with the result that large entire regiments of 365 men each surrendered and were incorporated into the federal ranks.

Thus without a drop of bloodshed the Federals gained possession of a strategic point at which in their swift drive against the northern rebel stronghold.

The Government explanation is that the rebel generals have told their men they were fighting for the Government and that they have been quick to return to their allegiance as soon as they discovered their mistake. The Federal commanders hope for further surrenders of this sort.

Dispatches indicated a state of affairs also favorable to the Federals on the West Coast. Following the advance of the rebel army under Gen. Manuel Medrano, which moved south from Sonora down through the State of Sinaloa to Culyias, Mazatlan, one of three valuable West Coast ports, was the object.

REBELS GAIN IN WEST.

Defending Mazatlan from the rebels was a small force under Gen. Jaime Carrillo. A Government announcement today said the advance had stopped, although it did not indicate when, where or why. A possible explanation was found, however, in dispatches which told of withdrawal of some of Mexico's men for use on the Chihuahua front.

Success of this rebel West Coast venture might give them a base of operations for at least a time against Mexico City by way of the state of Nayarit and the city of Guadalajara.

Such an offensive would threaten the rear of Gen. Calles' army and probably divert some of Calles' forces from the northern front.

With the reported arrival in Quayamas, Sonora, of 1300 rebel troops from the lower district of Baja California, Gen. Manzo abandoned the Nogales headquarters that he and Arnulo Aguirre of the lower district had not revolted as first stated.

Gen. Manzo declared the 1300 soldiers had deserted Aguirre and left lower Baja California without reinforces to those who remained loyal to the government.

Reports indicate some 2000 Federal troops have been sent westward to Durango, capital of the state of that name. Only a small rebel garrison is believed to remain there and little difficulty is expected in capturing the city.

Moving westward from Monterey, government reports said, Gen. Andres Almazan had joined forces with 8000 men ready to aid in the rebel point attack on Torreon.

FACE FIRING SQUAD

Government announcements asserted an offer of surrender had been received from Gen. M. Aguirre, commander of the rebel forces in the state of Vera Cruz, who was forced to flee the city of Vera Cruz after most of his force returned to the government banner.

The general's offer was made conditional on his being allowed safely to make his way out of the country.

The announcement said the offer was refused and that Aguirre was told he and his men would have to surrender unconditionally and submit to court-martial.

It is said here the government does not intend to be lenient with the rebel leaders, and that if blood doesn't flow on the battlefields it will at least run freely before firing squads.

Reports for there have been three federal executions, Gen. Jesus Palomares Lopez, Mexico City; Gen. Juan Leguzas at Alvarado, Vera Cruz, and Gen. Ireneo Villereal at Parras, Nuevo Leon. Whether the rebels have executed any men is not known here.

CALM IN MEXICO CITY.

Meanwhile Mexico City remains calm. Aerial and railroad communication has been resumed with the United States and steamers are sailing again at Vera Cruz.

The most serious effect of the revolution in the capital has been economic in nature. Business in general has entered such a dull period that some concerns have been obliged to close down. Salary slashes on a wide scale have become necessary.

The fall of Juarez, which took a toll of two American lives in El Paso and gave great crowds of American spectators first-hand view of a battle, has placed two border ports of entry in rebel hands.

But the other two, Nuevo Laredo and Matamoros, seemed effectively protected by the recapture of Monterey.

American mining engineers, their wives and children, were ordered today to evacuate Mazata, El Favor and Cinco Minas, in the State of Jalisco, as Mexican rebel and federal forces are preparing for battle in the vicinity.

Serious firing has been heard and the Americans have left their homes and are seeking refuge with the American consulate at Guadalajara until peace has been restored. This information was contained in dispatches received at the State Department.

AMERICANS FLEEING.

Cinco Minas is the largest silver mining area in the world and produces 12 per cent of all the silver in the world. The mine is owned by an American mining company of Kansas City, a subsidiary of the Guggenheim interests.

Straggling bands of rebels have been plundering the countryside while federal troops have been rushed from Mexico City.

In order to protect the Americans in remote scattered districts, the order to evacuate their homes was given. Several groups of Americans already have arrived in Guadalajara and are being sheltered at the American consulate there.

While the abandonment of their homes is a precautionary measure, the Americans now drifting into Guadalajara report sporadic instances of clashes between Mexican regulars and roving rebels.

craft had been ordered, but said his plant had been working day and night to fill the order.

Nogales, Sonora, March 11—Adolfo de la Huerta, former provincial president of Mexico and ex-revolutionary leader, is nearly ready to join the revolution, it is said here. Gen. Enrique Estrada, former De La Huerta leader, who came to Nogales from Los Angeles, is already definitely allied with the revolution and will soon be given a specific command.

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 11 (INS)—Stiff opposition will be encountered by federal forces now making their campaign in the northwest of Mexico, rebel leaders here said today. The rebel force at present defending Torreon is estimated here as far in excess of 5000 men. In addition, the rebel board of strategy has organized a second line of defense consisting of a force of about the same size concentrated at Chihuahua.

Nogales, Ariz., March 11 (AP)—Dispatches from Culiacan to the Nogales Herald today said the State of Nayarit, south of Mazatlan, was in arms, assuring the revolutionists that if Gen. Carrillo and his Federal force retreats he will have to fight his way toward Mexico City.

New York, March 11 (AP)—Gen. Marion V. Montero, representative here of the Mexican revolutionists, said today that Gen. Enrique Estrada, former Secretary of War under Obregon, had joined the revolution. Estrada, who has been an exile in the United States for the last five years, has been designated chief of operations in Zacatecas, Montero said. He added that Estrada had decided to join the revolution after determining the revolutionists were anxious to settle the religious question on a liberal basis.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., March 11 (INS)—Juan Ascarate, who is in the United States to obtain planes for the Mexican government has applied for permission to use Mitchel Field as a takeoff point in flying them to Mexico, Capt. Waltershender, operations officer of the airport, said today. Officials at Washington are considering Gen. Ascarate's application.

$50,000,000 U. S. Mail Suit Won by Rails

Washington, March 11 (AP)—The government will be unable to recover $50,000,000 under a Supreme Court decision today that increased pay granted railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission for carrying the mails should take effect from the date the railroads filed applications. After the government had paid the increase to a number of roads, dating it from the filing of the applications, the comptroller general ruled it should only have dated from the issuance of the commission's order.

The government then sought to recover $45,000,000, and sought to retain $5,000,000 more due railroads provided the increase dated from door were smashed and 30 lodgers on the fourth floor of this structure fled to the street.

The injured were Mr. and Mrs. Sergieto and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Desrouleva, both occupying apartments on the second floor of the annex. The Desrouleirs' daughter, Marie, 6, was not awakened, although plaster showered down upon her bed. The four adults were bruised and cut by plaster.

Many of those asleep in the Y. M. C. A. building were hurled from their beds. Twelve lodgers in the Quinebaug Club nearly were jarred and frightened, and the roar of the blast made many others in the neighborhood think their boilers had exploded.

Luckily no fire followed the explosion, and when firemen, summoned by the night telephone operator, reached the scene, they helped the injured persons out. It is believed that a gas heater may have been left burning and that it caused the explosion.

Electric light current failed in the district and this added to the confusion. The two stores which were partially wrecked, the stool being entered about the floor are a millinery shop conducted by Mrs. Sergieto and the shoe store of David Lentl.

14 ARE GIVEN DIVORCES

Ten women and four men were granted divorces today by Judge Arthur E. Beane in the uncontested divorce session of Middlesex Probate court.

Mayor Andrew A. Cassasa of Revere appeared as counsel for Mrs. Eliza Smith of Everett who was granted a decree from Frank H. Smith on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. The couple were married July 21, 1900.

Mrs. Clara C. Kimball of Bedway was given a decree from Harry A. Kimball of Newton, her fifth husband, on desertion testified for her, as to alleged acts of cruelty.

Mrs. Agnes Bennett Frye was given a decree from Harold L. Frye for cruelty. Mrs. Frances M. Saltonstall of Waltham testified for her.

Mrs. Julia A. Cahoon of Bowdoin st., Somerville, whose divorce suit is pending against Edward F. Cahoon, also of Somerville, today filed a contempt petition against her husband. She alleged he had taken their daughter, Margaret, three, who with William A., two, was awarded to the mother temporarily.

SUMMARY OF SITUATION IN MEXICO WAR

Developments in the Mexican situation follow:

1—Opening of the second week of the Mexican revolution found Government forces converging rapidly in the region of Torreon, where Gen. Escobar, rebel commander-in-chief, is reported in retreat after evacuating the city.

2—Gen. Calles, generalissimo of the Federal armies, leading a powerful body of picked men estimated at 18,000, was proceeding northward along the National railway toward Torreon.

3—Canitas, important railway junction, held by the rebels for a short time, fell before the advancing Federals without bloodshed, more than 1000 men surrendering, according to Mexico City reports.

4—While the Federals were proceeding northward through Zacatecas, the rebels were developing an important movement along the West Coast in Sinaloa. This movement was under command of Gen. Cruz, with Mazatlan as their immediate goal.

5—Should Mazatlan fall to the insurrectionists, a way would be open through Nayarit and Guadalajara to Mexico City itself, enabling the rebels to outflank Gen. Calles and possibly take him in the rear.

6—The Federal forces were alarmed in a wide half-moon which has been steadily constricting toward the northwest. Federals under Gen. Almazan on the right flank were advancing toward Torreon from the east, keeping pace with the Calles movement from the south.

7—To meet this double threat heavy rebel reinforcements were proceeding southward toward Torreon. Other bodies were rushing down the Southern Pacific railway toward Mazatlan.

8—About 1300 soldiers in the lower district of Baja California went over to the insurrection and were reported en route across the Gulf of California, to aid in the drive on Masatlan.

9—Gen. Aguirre, rebel leader in Vera Cruz, who was decisively defeated last week, was reported to have asked terms of surrender. Government vessels were guarding against his escape by sea. He was told unconditional surrender was the only terms he would get.

10—The likelihood that the Government would take strong measures with the rebel leaders was indicated at Mexico City, where court-martial and executions were expected to close the uprising.

11—Followers of Adolfo de la Huerta, former provisional President of Mexico, were reported joining the rebels.

Ten Injured as Big Hotel Is Destroyed

Reading, Pa., March 11 (AP)—Fire early today destroyed the Colonial Hotel, Fifth and Court sts., leaving a casualty list of ten injured persons and a property loss estimated by the proprietor at $500,000.

Only the four walls of the four-story, 100-room hotel were left standing a few hours after the first alarm was sounded shortly after midnight. Nine of the fifty guests were unaccounted for when the fire was over, but were believed to have safely reached places of shelter.

Memorial Service for Prof. Young

London, March 11 (AP)—Ambassador Houghton read the lesson and Sir William H. Beveridge, director of the London school of economics, gave an address at a memorial service to Prof. Allyn Abbott Young, former Harvard professor, who died March 7.

The service, held in St. Clement Danes Church in the Strand, was attended by hundreds of students and the professional staff of the school of economics, of which Mr Young had been professor of political economy.

Dramatic Defense of Nobile Revealed by His Own Story

Following one of the most remarkable trials in history, during which scores of documents and hundreds of witnesses were examined behind closed doors, the board of inquiry appointed by Premier Mussolini of Italy has exonerated Gen. Umberto Nobile responsible for the loss of the airship Italia and a portion of her crew in the Arctic. It also has condemned him for permitting himself to be the first rescued by the Swedish aviator, Lieut. Einar Lundborg.

During the trial not one word of the testimony was made public, either in condemnation of Gen. Nobile or in his defense.

A series of exclusive articles by Gen. Nobile giving for the first time his own dramatic story of the disaster and the scientific achievements of the expedition as he sees them, has been obtained. In effect these articles constitute his defense.

The first of these articles is presented herewith. The others will follow day by day until the series is completed.

By GENERAL UMBERTO NOBILE
Commander of the Ill-Fated North Pole Expedition of the Italian Dirigible Italia

MANY people have an idea that the Polar expedition of the dirigible Italia began only on the day of the catastrophe, or, at most, from the flight which ended in disaster. They are also unaware of the most important vicissitudes of that flight.

In one of the many books that have been published in Europe on what has been called the "Polar Drama of the Italia," I read that the Italia had flown from Rome to King's Bay, and thence it had left on the morning of May 23, 1928, and had flown directly to the North Pole.

Arriving at the top of the earth, the cross given by the Holy Father and the Italian flag were dropped, and the Italia had begun her return voyage during which the accident occurred.

Thus for many people all our enterprise was reduced to a simple aerial voyage from Italy to the pole, to the letting fall of a flag and a cross on the pole, and to an accident. The two previous flights accomplished by the Italia in the polar regions, one of which was most important, simply did not exist.

Consequently, the people are also ignorant of the very considerable scientific works undertaken during these voyages, although I mentioned them at the time in my wireless reports.

I shall rapidly summarize the adventures of the last hours of the final flight before describing the two earlier flights and their scientific achievements.

After our departure from the North Pole, which we left at 2 in the morning of May 24, we continually encountered wind and fog. I say fog, but sometimes it was really a low cloud.

On the other hand, we were never able to ascertain our position by the height of the sun. Only in the neighborhood of the Pole, and then at short intervals, were we able to navigate above the fog.

As the fog became higher and higher—it was necessary not to lose sight of the ground, to be able to ascertain our speed and direction—we descended below it. From that moment on steered through wind and fog for 30 hours without ever being able to discern the sun, or even a tiny opening of sky.

When one steers under such conditions the mind is always depressed the fatigue of long sleepless hours is felt more.

At the beginning of May 25, the weather did not show any signs of improvement. Malmgren was very anxious and advised me to force the velocity so that we should reach our northern base as quickly as possible. Therefore, I started the three motor.

The real speed of the airship thus had reached, and even surpassed, 63 miles an hour, but now we advanced over the ground with a speed barely 24 miles an hour.

Naturally, forcing the speed in this manner notably increased the amount of gasoline consumed; therefore, more than ever it was imperative to ascertain our position, to be able to calculate what quantity of gasoline was needed to reach King's Bay.

In the hours that immediately preceded the disaster, my chief occupation was that of controlling the route with frequent measurements of speed, direction and radio bearings. I attended to these controls with the collaboration of two of the three naval officers on board.

Every now and then we were struck by fierce gusts of snow. Incrustations of ice formed everywhere, and, from time to time, some piece would detach itself from the propellers projecting from the sides of the airship.

At this moment Mariano, the first officer on board, proposed that we should rise above the fog to take the height of the sun. We would then be able to ascertain our whereabouts through astronomical determinations.

After the height of the sun had been taken I started the motors, and for some minutes the navigation continued above the fog. We scanned the horizon in the hope of seeing the outline of the mountains of Spitsbergen, but nothing was to be seen. I then decided to return below the fog.

At about 1200 feet altitude we began our normal course again. The wind seemed to have lessened in its energy.

At 10:25 I was in the fore part of the cabin at the window, intent on measuring the time of the fall of a glass ball filled with liquid colored with aniline. Calculating the time the ball took in falling, I was able to deduce our height above sea level. Thus I rectified the indications of the instrument for measuring heights.

Suddenly, Cecioni warned me that the dirigible had become heavier. I turned to look at the instruments. They indicated that it was descending rapidly, though the ship was weighed down at the stern. I instantly perceived the danger, and, therefore, ordered Trojani to put the motors at full speed.

But I quickly perceived that the dynamic support was insufficient to arrest the descent. The airship continued rapidly downward. I realized there was nothing more to be done.

I thought only of lessening the consequences. I had the motors stopped to prevent the dirigible from taking fire, and ordered Cecioni to let fall the chain of lead balls, which served as ballast.

A second later, I saw the sharp-pointed ice cone up to meet us. I calmly awaited the crash. It was terrible. Then something fell on my head. I was flattened. I felt as if something was broken in my body, without feeling any pain. Then I was thrown out.

I thought coldly:

"Now all is ended."

When I opened my eyes I found I was lying on a tremendously convulsed pack. Near me were Malmgren, Zappi and Cecioni. Standing were Mariano, Vigilieri, Behounek, Trojani and Biagi. I saw the dirigible, now lightened, rise, carried by the wind toward the east. My glance lingered on the large black letters painted on the side, "Italia."

Then the dirigible disappeared in the fog.

All was lost. I saw that I was wounded in the head and had an arm and leg broken. It was difficult to breathe. I believed that I had only two or three hours of life left. I was not sorry. I was glad.

I turned to my companions and exhorted them to raise their thoughts to God, to turn their hearts to our far-off country. Today I am still at a loss fully to explain it.

Continue General Nobile's absorbing narrative in tomorrow's Boston Evening American, in which he presents interesting theories as to what really caused the wrecking of the Italia.

Mishap Caused by Ice on Exterior of Dirigible

These projectiles of ice were chiefly thrown from the small propellers which served to put the motor of the wireless cabin in action. Therefore I kept an eye on that propeller. And when it stopped, I took care, personally, to detach the ice which continued to form rapidly.

Our navigation proceeded thus between the uncertainties of the route and anxiety over the amount of gasoline consumed, when an accident occurred.

The elevator control stopped and remained fixed in such a position that the dirigible was bound to descend. The trouble was due to ice having formed inside the mechanism.

When I perceived this I stopped the motors. It was the only way of preventing a fall. After this was done I was no longer anxious because I was quite sure that the descent would be immediately stopped with the airship given greater lightness.

This, in fact, is what happened. We descended for a minute or two, then began to rise slowly again.

If You Must Dance on Fire Escape Put on Some Clothes

Police of East Dedham St. station brought a series of dances to a sudden close early today after the dancer, a scantily clad man, had performed on the fire escape of a tenement in the hotel and later in the hotel lobby.

The hotel clerk said the man had been a well-mannered guest for two weeks, but today he insisted on staging a fire-escape dance.

Bellboys hauled him into his room several times and finally called the police when he appeared in the lobby. He was taken to City Hospital.

$107,000,000 TO LINK ALL N. Y.

New York, March 11 (AP)—The board of estimate voted today to construct a tri-borough bridge to link Manhattan, Bronx and Queens, and to build a vehicular tunnel under the Narrows to connect Staten Island and Brooklyn. They will be paid for by toll charges.

Comptroller Charles W. Berry was instructed to sell the necessary corporate stock or serial bonds for the financing of the enterprises. The cost of the tri-borough bridge is estimated at $92,000,000 and of the tunnel at $75,000,000.

Six Thugs Get $2000

New York, March 11 (AP)—Six holdup men swerved their automobile into the path of a collector's truck of the Queens-Manhattan Traction Company in Long Island City today, and escaped with $2000.

LAWYER FINDS NEW WAY FOR DRY LAW REPEAL VOTE

ART'S IDEA OF 'IDEAL GIRL'

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

The "Typical American Girl" is a marvelous clothes-horse. She wears her hats and gowns like nobody in this world can. She is a splendid physical specimen.

She is athletically tempered. Domestic, but not enslaved to the drudgery of housework. She is honestly inquisitive but not impertinently curious.

The "Typical American Girl" is the composite of Amelia Earhart, an Anne Morrow and a Helen Wills, says Royal Bailey Farnum, Massachusetts director of art education and head of the Massachusetts Normal Art School.

And if there is such a glorious combination walking on two firm feet, let her step up and claim the $5000 offered by 17 newspapers in the country and the Smart Set Magazine, as a token offered by them in recognition of her typical standards.

QUALITIES OF THREE TYPES

Farnum is a noted artist. He has three daughters, one of whom was crowned the May Queen at Wheaton College last June. So Farnum knows what he is talking about. He knows the college girl, he teaches art students. He has literally met thousands of girls in the past years.

"Amelia Earhart comes nearest the American type of any," Farnum said, "but she isn't the clothes type that Helen Wills is. Anne Morrow is American, but not typical. She is not the emancipated and aggressive American girl.

"The typical American girl should have the qualifications of these three. She should have the intitive, 'spunk,' do what I want to do' spirit of Miss Earhart, the decorus reserve and domestic simplicity of Miss Morrow and the sartorial perfection of Helen Wills. Miss Wills has been too long foreignly influenced to represent truly the American type She is an American cosmopolitan.

"American girls know how to dress. They are clothes conscious. They have clothes sense. They are the best dressed girls in the world. They for some the typical American girl must be well garbed. She is such a splendid physical specimen that she carries off to perfection whatever she wears.

"The best type, I think, is the athletic girl, but not an extreme One who goes in for varied sports, I mean. The best type is also domestic in likes and appreciates a home, although being normal and typically American, she hates the drudgery of housework.

DEMANDS EDUCATION

"The typical American girl, a splendid physical specimen, grand to look at. Not the dull face type, by any means.

"She demands education, but wants the major portion of it to fit her for living, physically and intellectually. She is not content as were her sisters of 30 years ago to receive only a smattering of culture at a finishing school. Consequently, I feel the girls' colleges will have to meet this typical girl i speak of if they are going to maintain themselves. They are thinking educationally as well as other ways.

"They are going to demand the things the world requires."

So there you are! Do you fit these standards? And how?

ILL, BARES CRUELTY OF TAX

New York, March 11—Need for the injection of a little common humanity in the income tax law is demonstrated by the heartbreaking case of William Wolff, tuberculosis victim, and his wife and baby girl.

Although Wolff is at Saranac Lake, trying for the last eight and a half months to regain his health, the income tax agents have told him there is no hope of avoiding heavy taxes. He will have to pay next Friday, money sorely needed by his wife and baby in the Bronx.

Under present income tax rules, nothing can save Wolff from a cruel exaction of the full pound of income tax flesh.

The crushing burden of the tax on Wolff, who has not worked since last May, is all the more burdensome, because he got a bonus in March of last year for work done in 1927.

By a cruel irony, of which the mechanical, inhuman operation of the income tax law takes no account, all of this bonus went for doctors. And, under the law, doctors' bills cannot be deducted, although loss for damage to an automobile, or in a merchant's stock by reason of markdowns for changing style, can be deducted.

As soon as Wolff got his bonus money, he had what the world calls "a blessed event." He became the father of a baby girl, Flora Jean But in performing the sacred duty of motherhood, which the nation assumes to value highly, Mrs. Wolff nearly lost her life. She spent months in the hospital.

For weeks she hovered in pain between life and death. All the bonus money went and all of Wolff's savings besides, but now the income tax department has advised the Wolffs that he must raise somehow the cash to pay a tax on that long-spent money.

SAFE ROBBED IN VIEW OF AUTOS

Under the glare of an arc light, on a heavily travelled thoroughfare, a safe in the office of the Colonial Filling Station, 77 Washington st., Quincy, was opened early today and rifled of $164.55. It was the first safe break in Quincy since the slaying of Patrolman Alfred M. Hollis, in October, 1927.

The filling station is located two blocks from Quincy sq., on the main road to the South Shore, where auto traffic continues all night, and within a few feet of a big street light.

Entrance was obtained by breaking a window in the front door, only a step from the sidewalk. The combination was knocked from the safe, and it was opened by the can-opener method, the receipts from Saturday noon being taken.

In Watertown nervous burglars started two safebreaking jobs on Walnut st., only to abandon both.

The offices entered were the Brittain and Cannon Co., cash and door makers, and the Lewis-Shepard Co., operators of a machine shop.

Both safes were attacked with a diamond-pointed electric drill, which was left behind.

MOVING FROM VATICAN CITY

Vatican City, March 11 (AP)—Departure of those unauthorized to live in the papel confines, particularly near the Belvedere and the old and new Vatican seminary, has begun, in accordance with a recent decree.

It has been agreed that the school in the Via Porta Angelica, founded by Pope Pius X., will not be evacuated until the summer, in order to allow the students to complete their studies and the teachers to find new premises.

It is reported the Holy See is likely to purchase a large palace on the Piazza Risorgimento, opposite the ancient Vatican walls, for the use of servants and visitors. The Swiss guard is likely to be augmented.

22 Students Start Mt. Washington Climb

Hanover, N. H., March 11 (INS)—Field trips, due to 12 hours by a blizzard on Mt. Washington, 21 Dartmouth College seniors and a professor, Winsted R. Smoyer of Akron, O., today start on the long and dangerous ascent from Pinkham Notch base.

Smoyer left Hanover with the intention of braving alone the perils of the mountain in winter, but a radiogram from the senior party said he had joined the others. During the Thanksgiving recess a freshman, Herbert Young lost his life while climbing the mountain. The party today was in touch with civilization by radio.

Two Men Drop Dead, One in Franklin St.

Two men dropped dead in Boston today, both being pronounced lifeless when their bodies were received at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

The first, Aaron Weintraub, 53, of Orr st., Revere, collapsed in Franklin st. near Federal st., and was taken to the hospital by Traffic Officer Carlos of Station 20, Milk st. Less than two hours later the body of Sebastino de Nubile, 40, was found in the Tileston st., North End. building where he lived.

Fire-Fighters Are "the Innocents"

Norristown, Pa., March 11 (AP)—State police and prohibition agents reported that they had raided the fire department headquarters at Pennsburg, near here, and confiscated nine barrels of beer and six slot machines.

The beer and slot machines were said to have been found in the basement of the fire company's building. Members of the fire company here declared they did not know the liquor and gambling devices were in the building.

Federal Tax on Earned Income Rapped by Boston Attorney

"It is plain that we ought to have, and at once, a downward revision of the tax upon earned income," said Clarence W. Rowley, a leading Boston attorney, in commending the nation-wide movement for a reduction of federal taxation to relieve professional men and women of their present burden.

This movement to obtain relief for physicians, architects, lawyers and others whose earned incomes are being overtaxed by the government, is being supported by the Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

"There should be a reduction of at least 50 per cent upon the tax assessed against the earnings of labor of whatever kind," continued Atty Rowley, "so that earned income will not be called upon to pay any more than its fair and just share of the tax burden.

"Perspiration" pays a hundred taxes where "easy money" pays one. The working man, the wage-earner, struggling to keep his little home together for the enjoyment of his wife and little ones is the bone and sinew of our country.

LURDEN OF TAXATION

"He earns what he gets, he consumes what he earns; and, as in the last analysis every tax is passed on to the consumer, out of the earnings of the wage-earner come the multitude of taxes indirectly exacted, paid without question or complaint and usually paid without understanding, except in the most general way, that taxes form a part of the rent, the butcher's bill or the grocer's bill.

"When we realize that tax experts, qualified by years of study, fail to analyze the problem, we readily appreciate how little a man, whose whole time and energy is consumed in earning by the sweat of his brow a livelihood for his little family and himself, may know of the technical elements of intricate tax problems. Every man who works is made to bend a little lower because of the burden of taxation.

"Common sense, common humanity, national progress, business welfare and moral welfare all demand that the working man, who earns by his toil every dollar of income he receives, shall have his tax burden lightened if he is to bear only his just and proportionate share of the enormous expenditures of government.

"The suggestion that there should be a further reduction of the tax upon earned income is but an acknowledgement of our duty toward the men who work, and our appreciation of the public as well as private advantages, which come directly from earned incomes of working people.

CALLS LAWS ABTIFICIAL

"Under the present law, net income not in excess of $5000 shall be considered as earned net income and it is entitled to a 25-per cent credit of the amount of the tax. That provision seems plain enough, but many a taxpayer, whose entire net income is under $5000 has found that he could not get even this 25 per cent reduction.

"There was once a time when our laws were founded upon plain common sense and sound reasoning. There was something to anchor to, something natural about the laws. They were simple; everyone understood them. Today our laws are so complex and intricate and so frequently changed that no person can possibly familiarise himself with all of them.

"The income tax laws are artificial. Figures and calculations are arbitrary. Some of the rules are easily understood, others so complicated as to be unintelligible to the layman and subject of controversy between judges, lawyers and taxpayers.

"Let's take the case of a little partnership. Two men, Mr. Work and Mr. Swell, have each $1000. They buy a taxicab and operate it under the firm name of Work & Swell. each partner contributing ten hours of service, keeping the cab working twenty hours every day. Suppose they earn, after paying for their gas, (including the gas tax) tires, insurance, repairs, licenses, etc., $10,000 in a year and make their partnership return showing that each has earned $5000.

LABOR BIGGEST ASSET

"If unmarried, each is entitled to $1500 exemption, and pays a tax upon the balance, $3500. Is this earned income? The present law says that not more than 20 per cent of it shall be considered earned income. They are credited with "earned income" of only $7000, on which they are entitled to a 25 per cent reduction, and pay the full tax on the balance, $2800. Is this fair?

"If we are to have national prosperity we must see to it that the men who help our nation to rise to the foremost in the world have steady employment, respectable homes, proper working conditions and fair opportunity for such advancement as they merit.

"Labor has transformed our country from a wilderness to a paradise; labor is today our greatest national asset; without it our nation cannot live, our people cannot live. Let us humbly and honestly acknowledge its value, let us encourage and help it, by treating it justly, lest we fall into national decay. Cut the tax on the earnings of labor, upon 'earned income' by 50 per cent or more, and labor will still bear its full share of the cost of government."

WARM WAVE DUE IN HUB TONIGHT

The languid snowfall of today, it turns out, wasn't because of the cold at all but because of the humidity.

The cold wave split into two sections one centering over northern New England and the other centered at North Carolina. In between moved a bit of warmer weather, resulting in the humidity being chilled or something and becoming snow.

So there you are, and within 24 hours, the weather man predicted today, the mercury will be above freezing.

Forecast for Boston: Cloudy, warmer tonight and Tuesday; southwest winds.

URGES N. Y. GOVERNOR TO ACT

New York, March 11 (AP)—A plan for the submission of the prohibition question to public referendum, with provision for a form of state option, has been presented to Governor Roosevelt with the request that he recommend it to Congress.

The plan was drawn by Edward A. Alexander, an attorney, and has the endorsement of Senator Edwards of New Jersey, whose proposal along similar lines was defeated in Congress.

Quoting article I of the bill of rights granting the people the privilege "peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for redress," Alexander proposes a national citizens convention of the representative business men from each congressional district, who, after discussion of prohibition would petition Congress that the question of repeal or modification be submitted.

Alexander also suggests a joint-resolution be introduced in Congress for submission of a repeal proposal to state conventions were elected delegates would vote "in accordance with the second method of ratification provided for in Article V of the Constitution."

150 PRIESTS AT RITES FOR FR. SUPPLE

More than 150 priests today attended funeral rites at St. John's Church, Blue Hill ave., for the Rev James A. Supple, D. D., of St. Patrick's Church, Stoneham, who died Friday.

The church was filled to overflowing. Most of the leading Catholic clergymen of teh archdiocese and several from outside were present and a choir of 25 priests participated in the solemn requiem mass.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. P. J. Supple, brother of the deceased, was the celebrant, assisted by the Rev John H. Powers of St. Monica's, Methuen; the Rev. John F. Kelleher of Sacred Heart Church, Bradford; the Rev. Ambrose A. Dore of St. John's, North Cambridge; the Rev. Edward F. Ryan of St. Catherine's, Norwood, and the Rev. Mr's McSweiney of St. Ann's, Gloucester. The eulogy was by the Rev. John F. Cummins of Sacred Heart Church, Roslindale.

Among those within the altar rail during the services were Bishop Rummel of Omaha, the Rt. Rev. John B. Peterson, auxiliary bishop of Boston; the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Joseph H. McGlinchey of Lynn and the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine of Brookline. Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery, Holliston.

Hope for Elsie Janis

Paris, March 11 (AP)—The condition of Elsie Janis, American stage star, remained unchanged this morning and still was extremely serious. Her physicians, however, do not think the illness necessarily will prove fatal.

ESSEX COUNTY HEALTH CAMP UNDERWAY

By HELEN COOLIDGE

At this time of the year the headquarters of the Essex County Health Association in Beverly is a busy place.

During the past week application blanks were sent out to local committees in towns in the county for the children who will attend the Association's Health Camp in Middleton this summer.

More than 80 children, from 6 to 12 years, will be cared for this year, some of whom are underweight and some exposed to tuberculosis. The two months of outdoor life is designed to build these children up, to send them home strong and happy while teaching them, at the same time, how to take good care of their health.

Plans are being made to add a new bungalow and an infirmary o the camp buildings this summer, as the number of children attending increases each year. Each additional bungalow provides for twenty more children, and another counsellor. Sometime the camp committee hopes to be able to build a swimming pool, as the children are now obliged to go to Beverly Farms for their swim.

The Essex County Health Association is a branch of the State Tuberculosis League, and the work which is being done along the North Shore is typical of the work being done all over Massachusetts by the State League.

Many a thin, undeveloped child who spent the two summer months at the health camp has gone back to school in the fall with a gain in health which may have saved him a life of sickness. These children are followed up during the winter so that they will not lose the benefits of the summer by neglecting to take proper care of themselves.

Vancouver Man, 29, Becomes a Baronet

Vancouver, B. C., March 11 (AP)—Sir Windham Francis Carmichael-Anstruther, a 29-year-old bachelor draughtsman, known to his friends as "Bicky," has become eleventh Baronet of Anstruther and eighth Baronet of Carmichael by the death of his cousin.

The title carries with it the hereditary honor of service to the royal household in Scotland, and one of the masters of the household, Sir Eric has gone to Scotland, but is expected to return to Vancouver.

Copeland to Speak at Harvard Union

Charles Townsend Copeland, Boylston professor of rhetoric and oratory, emeritus at Harvard University, will give a program of readings in Harvard Union at 8:30 Monday evening, March 25. He will give a short lecture on Tennyson and Browning and read from their works, as well as those of Dickens and Thackeray.

Services Today

Funeral services for James W. Gilmore, 60, of 11 Alleghany st., Roxbury will be held today from the Mission Church, Roxbury. Gilmore was a lifelong resident of the Mission Hill section of Roxbury, and for the past 20 years was a constable. He is survived by his wife and one son.

Lenin's Body Flexible as When He Was Alive

Moscow, March 11 (AP)—The remarkable state of preservation in which the body of Nikolai Lenin, Communist leader, has been kept since his death five years ago, was demonstrated today. For the first time since Lenin's interment in his great red squar mausoleum, Prof. Vorobyov, chief embalmer of the former premier's body, definitely refuted rumors that gradual petrification had begun.

In the presence of a group of foreign newspapermen and Foreign Office officials, Vorobyov opened Lenin's last covered coffin and lifting Lenin's head, gently flexed the ears and nose and moved the skin from the cheeks and jaw, thus proving the remarkable flexibility of the body and its excellent state of preservation.

Trace Uale Slaying to Chicago Gangster

Chicago, March 11 (AP)—Another notorious gang slaying—that of Frank Uale in New York last year—had been added to the seven murders with which Jack McGurn had been identified by Chicago police following the visit of New York officers who conferred with Chicago officers about the Valentine's Day mass murder on North Clark st.

Federal Agent Max Kramer made the identification of McGurn. Jack Perry, Louis (Little New York) Rosenzweig and Wm. Skinner are involved in the Uale assassination convinced investigators the New York and Chicago murders were done by the same gang.

Recital by Judge O'Connell's Sister

Miss Elizabeth M. O'Connell will give a recital in Jordan Hall, next Monday afternoon, featuring song and music of Ireland. Her brother, Judge Daniel T. O'Connell of the superior court, will deliver a talk on the music of Ireland, which will be interpreted by the singer.

Miss O'Connell will be assisted by Miss Grace Gilday Donahue of Dorchester, harpist; Miss Lillian Erlan, organist and accompanist; Miss Pauline Carey of Dorchester and Miss Dorothea Donnelly of Forest Hills as assisting soloists. Among several selections, Miss O'Connell will sing compositions by Walton O'Donnell of Dublin, an outstanding modern composer.

Hold Conference on Short Wave Channels

Washington, March 11 (AP)—The radio commission began a series of conferences today on the use of 89 short wave channels set aside for commercial aviation and drew a large representation from that field, including Herbert Hoover, Jr., of the Western Airways, Inc.

The purpose of the conference is to co-ordinate the views of aviation operating companies, communication companies, and others interested in establishing means for communication between aircraft and ground stations and between ground stations along aviation routes.

Girl Who Saw Miami Murder Seals Lips

New York, March 11 (AP)—The Daily News said today a reporter had found and questioned a woman here who witnessed the slaying of Thomas (Patsy) Walsh in Miami, Fla. Demaris Dore, night club hostess, a friend of Walsh, was quoted as saying the slaying of the former body guard of Arnold Rothstein was the result of a sudden quarrel between Walsh and one of his gambler associates in the Miami-Biltmore Hotel. She refused to name the killer.

MISS ANNE MORROW — MISS HELEN WILLS — MISS AMELIA EARHART

These three noted American girls have the qualifications that should be in the young lady picked in the Typical American Girl Quest, according to Royal Bailey Farnum, Massachusetts director of art education. He says the typical American girl must have the initiative of Miss Earhart, the decorous reserve and domestic simplicity of Miss Morrow, and the sartorial perfection of Helen Wills.

Sign This and Cut Your Taxes

To the Congress of the United States:

THE undersigned respectfully urges that Congress give immediate consideration to the proposition that there be a downward revision of all taxes on earned incomes.

This is urged because in many instances earners of salaries, wages, fees or commissions for personal services have only a few years of good incomes, and prior to and after that period have substantially smaller incomes.

Their period of better earnings, which might give them a chance to accumulate some savings, is heavily taxed. Labor in general, clerical workers, salesmen, lawyers, doctors, engineers, architects, journalists, accountants, actors, musicians, singers and members of all other professions are in the same plight in the matter of earned incomes, as compared with earnings on capital.

The use of my name on a petition to Congress is hereby granted.

Illyria Arrives at Fiji Islands

Suva, Fiji, March 11 (AP)—The yacht Illyria arrived here today from Rarotonga Island on the Cook group. All aboard were well. The vessel will remain here 12 days.

The Illyria left Boston in October carrying scientists to the South Seas. It dropped out of sight for some time and there was some anxiety about it.

New York to Greet Wilkins Tomorrow

New York, March 11 (NS)—One of New York's greatest greetings will be accorded Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, Antarctic explorer, when he arrives tomorrow, but all the fan-fare of trumpets and many welcome of the city will pale into nothingness in comparison to the welcoming smile Sir Hubert will get from Miss Suzanne Bennett, his fiancee.

Back Bay Girl Hurt by Brookline Auto

Tossed 25 feet through the air, when struck by an automobile driven by a Brookline girl, according to the police, Miss Mollie Katz, 21, of Falmouth st., Back Bay, was seriously injured today at Brookway and Revere Beach parkway, Revere. Police say the car was operated by Miss Alice Durland of Beacon st., Brookline.

New "Jumbo" Gets a Lot of Peeve On

New York, March 11 (AP)—Khartoum, the biggest elephant in captivity, has developed a sullen, dangerous disposition. There are extra steel bars on his cages at the Bronx Zoo. He inhabits one while a keeper cleans the other. He is 10 feet 7½ inches tall, two inches taller than the late Jumbo, P. T. Barnum's favorite.

MAYOR SUBMITS COUNTY BUDGET TO COUNCIL

Budget recommendations providing for a total expenditure of $3,675,519 in the county of Suffolk for the fiscal year of 1929 were submitted to the City Council today by Mayor Nichols and referred to the executive committee.

The total represents a reduction of $121,302.32 in the estimates presented to the mayor, but exceeds the county appropriations for 1928 by $94,906.

"An increase in the number of capital crimes to be tried in the Superior Criminal Court," says Mayor Nichols in a message accompanying the budget, "together with an expansion in the work of the Index commissioners, is reflected in an increased appropriation for stenographic, copying and indexing service."

The mayor points out that since 1918 the tax assessed on citizens of Boston for county purposes has increased approximately 30 per cent, and says: "The time is rapidly approaching when serious consideration must be given to relieving the city, at least in part, from this growing tax burden."

Hotel Proprietor Shot by Housekeeper

Phelps, N. Y., March 11 (AP)—George P. Mott, 67, proprietor of the Phelps Hotel, was reported near death at the Clifton Springs Sanatarium today while his housekeeper Mrs. Emily Wanzer, 45, formerly of Rochester, was under guard in her hotel room, and will be charged with the shooting.

Guests in the hotel, aroused by a shot, said they saw Mrs. Wanzer with the revolver and Mott lying on the floor.

Insulted by Guests Who Enter Home Through Roof

Wabash, Ind., March 11 (AP)—An insult to the hospitality of her home, Mrs. Jenny Rader of near Akron, Ind., calls the unconventional visit of two fliers. She has filed suit for $1000 damages, caused, she says, when Oscar Crabill, an aviator and his passenger, Arthur Coblentz, crashed through the roof.

The suit sets out that "these defendants paid an unexpected visit to her home by entering the same through an opening in the roof made by the defendant's airplane as it landed to discharge its passengers, although the portals of the plaintiffs home are always open to friends and guests."

PUT OUT FIRE ON FERRYBOAT

While one load of passengers calmly disembraked and another load took their places for the return trip, firemen today extinguished a fire in the pilot house of the ferryboat Ralph J. Palumbo as it lay in her East Boston slip.

The fire was caused by an overheated steam pipe that so heated the wood that it charred and finally blazed.

Firemen from Engine 9 and Ladder 2 extinguished the blaze with a damage of but $125.

At Thursday Devotions

The Rev. Maurice J. O'Brien of St. Joseph's Church, West End, will preach at the Thursday devotions in honor of the Little Flower at St. Stephen's Church, North End. The special noonday mass will be celebrated as usual at 12:15. Other services are at 3:30, 5:20 and 7:45 p. m.

ROOT EXPLAINS U. S. VIEWS ON WORLD COURT

Geneva, Switzerland, March 11 (AP)—The question of American adhesion to the World Court of International Justice was taken up today at the first meeting of a jurists' committee which is to consider revision of the court's statutes.

Vittorio Scialoja, Italian jurist, was elected president after Elihu Root, American member, declined the honor.

Sir Cecil Hurst of Great Britain presented a memorandum that the United States be given the right to resign from the court any time it desires.

The jurists tackled the problem by having read both the Kellogg note and the Root formula for American adhesion which Mr. Root explained briefly. He voiced his belief that agreements would be reached as to whether an advisory opinion should be asked or opposed.

Several jurists expressed belief that if the question of whether advisory opinions should be requested by unanimous or majority vote in the council was liquidated, American adhesion to the world court would be immediately simplified.

Geneva, March 11 (AP)—Military and naval experts assembled today to discuss control of manufacture of arms and war material in the League of Nations program for international disarmament.

When the experts have completed their work the league will summon the entire committee on armaments control of which Count Von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, is chairman.

Americans at today's session are Capt. George Washington Steele, naval attache to the American embassy, Paris; Maj. Charles C. Metler, assistant military attache, London; Maj. Barton K. Yount, assistant military attache for air, Paris, and Consul Elbridge D. Rand, of Geneva, as counsellor.

Musicians Plan Memorial Service

The annual memorial service of the Musicians' Mutual Relief Society will be held next Thursday in Convention Hall. A feature will be the singing of Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Lost Chord" by the Varsity Male Quartet, accompanied by full orchestra.

Roland Huxley will direct the orchestra, and former State Representative James T. Kenney, well-known Boston handmaster, will deliver the address. Taps will be given by Max I. Kruk and Walter M. Smith.

Thomas H. Finnigan, as presiding officer, will open the memorial concert, and the Rev. Charles L. Page will make the invocation. The quartet will sing "The Rosary," and a 'cello solo will be given by Joseph Zimbler, with Rudolph Nagle accompanying. There will be several notable orchestral selections.

SUCCESS ATTENDS SOCIETY'S EFFORTS TO RAISE CHARITY FUND—BETTY ALDEN

Money Procured in Substantial Amounts to Go to Aid the Children's Hospital

HOW TO RAISE A BENEFIT fund successfully might be the topic of an after dinner speech this evening at the Hotel Statler when potentates of the financial and fashionable world, 300 strong, gather about a prandial board and tell how things go with the fund for the Children's Hospital. Quietly, energetically, successfully, has the town been ranged all about by men and matrons keenly interested in the hospital and pledged to raise an enormous sum that this most necessary work may go bravely on.

AND NOW IN THE EYES OF the managing committee for the drive there gleams a light that tells of a drive successfully accomplished. So it very well may be this evening, after the last delicious dish has been disposed of, the good news may be formally stated—that to the last dollar the enormous sum set as the fund's goal has been obtained. There was no fanfare of trumpets, no announcement of gala benefits or novel means whereby many necessary dollars were to be diverted from their owners' pockets into the hospital's till.

INSTEAD, THE COMMITTEE, most representative and extremely influential, quietly garnered the dollars here and there from kindly hearted, philanthropical individuals who knew full well the needs of the fine institution that cares for and cures sick children. This evening Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, George von L. Meyer, Jr., S. Huntington Wolcott, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, George Peabody Gardner, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, William Endicott, John A. Lowell Blake and others of the committee may well appear elated. Important names by the score have been written on the golden scroll that tells of generous donations, royally given.

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS T. STANTON BADER of Dedham and Palm Beach gave with imperial generosity a sum of many, many thousands because of their daughter, Miss Constance Bader and her marvelous cure. The Henry Clay Jackson fund brought in another stupendous sum and consequential joy to the hearts of the committee. Mrs. Ames has given generously, so have Mrs. Charles Goddard Weld, Mrs. Cobb Walker, Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Mrs. Nathaniel F. Ayer, Mrs. John J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Phelan, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolphe Agassiz, Mr. and Mrs. George Bramwell Baker, Frank H. Stewart, Miss Sarah Bremer and Miss Louisa Hunnewell.

THE ROLL OF HONOR ALSO includes such names as Mrs. George H. Monks, William A. Gardner and George Peabody Gardner (whose gift was a rich one), Mr. and Mrs. Henry Horoblower, Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott, Henry Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott and John A. Lowell Blake, among many.

TENNIS, WHETHER PLAYED in Bermuda's sparkling sunlight or at the covered courts at Longwood is all one to so fine a performer at the nets as Miss Margaret Blake. With a splendid coat of golden tan acquired in Bermuda Miss Blake is back in town for the tournament at Longwood. Today and for several days this week feminine stars who play a smashing game and follow the tennis round here, there and everywhere will leap after high ones and make swift return, with machine gun like precision. For the national indoor singles are on and feminine tennis titles are in the making.

FOR YOUR TENNIS PLAYER, the fashionable miss who has successfully weathered a first winter and come into her own in her chosen field of sports, existence seems to be one tennis tournament after another. Miss Blake has just been playing tournament tennis at the Bermuda Tennis Club, where that marvel of the nets, the former Miss Martha Bayard, has also been an important figure. When Miss Bayard of New Jersey became Mrs. Henry R. Guild, she made affiliation with the local smart set and now sheds the cleam of her tennis crown on Boston.

AND WHEN ONE SWINGS A golf stick with the utmost professional finish of a Miss Harriet Ellison what more natural than to seek the links that lay green and rolling beneath a Palm Beach sun? Miss Ellison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Howe Ellison of Newton, has been playing over the splendid links of the Florida resort and adding new glinting leaves to her laurel collection. A sally to Florida is almost a yearly habit with Miss Ellison, who plays the fine old game each winter under the clear sunlight that is so vaunted an asset of that state.

MRS. CHARLES L. HARDING of Dedham and Newport is at Palm Beach this March with a swagger wardrobe designed to easily defy the brilliant sunshine America's Biarritz boasts as a chief attraction. The Hardings are occupying their place, "Chiora," and appear in the social swim as the smartest set at Palm Beach defines its frivolities. At the Patio Marguery at a luncheon given in honor of Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mrs. Harding's house guest, the former appeared in one of the very smart sports creations modistes raise to the nth degree and so make suitable for every occasion from breakfast time to eventide.

We had dinner with a prize fighter

We were surprised to watch him eat jelly

WE HAD dinner recently with a famous prize fighter—one of the big fellows noted the world over for his perfect fighting physique. We were interested in seeing what he would eat. We heard him tell one of the waiters to bring a glass of jelly. Before the meal was over, the great fighter cleaned up more than half of that glass of jelly.

That was a practical eye-opener as to the energy value of sugar. The active body of this man craved and needed sweets.

Normal children also are athletes and their energy-consuming bodies hunger for and need sweets. All people whose daily work is of an exhausting, physical nature hunger for and need sweets.

And all others need sugar as an appetizing agent. Sugar develops the flavor of health-giving cereals, of fruits and of vegetables, of milk in milk shakes, and of eggs in egg-nog.

Every grocery store carries pure jams, jellies and preserves, and enough canned fruits and vegetables to bring health to every table. The Sugar Institute.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that's pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

With no apologies TO ANYONE!

Do you choose a Coward Shoe for comfort...you needn't apologize for its appearance. Do you choose it for style...it doesn't owe you any apologies on the score of comfort.

Which makes it all very simple for you to buy shoes. You come in with a light heart...and go away with both the light heart and light feet.

That's all because Coward started 63 years ago to anticipate just what you'd want and need today. Comfort...you'll always want...and Coward Shoes always have it. That's the law here. The style that's smart today is naturally different than the one you had last year...and Coward has determined that you shall have that, too.

So with each new season, Coward is grateful for those many years of experience in styling comfort shoes—and in making style shoes comfortable...so that this year, as in all the years you've been wearing Cowards you need make no apologies to anyone.

Nation Will Watch Homes Conference

IT will seem like old times at college "spreads" when Mrs. Frank G. Allen, the young wife of the Governor, sits at the right of Mrs. Kenneth Thompson, toastmistress, at the Youth Conference luncheon on March 22.

Both are Wellesley College graduates with the common bond of motherhood. On this occasion it is expected that 500 other young women with similar interests will break bread with officers of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the Hotel Statler. Clubwomen throughout the nation are interested in this conference, the first of its kind. Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, first vice-president of the General Federation, will be there to find out what the young women today expect older clubwomen to contribute toward better homes.

Mrs. Azel A. Packard, State federation president, will address the luncheon conference on "Training in the Home for International Citizenship." The program will be conducted entirely by the "youth committee," Mrs. A. M. Hume, chairman.

Mrs. Kenneth Thompson

"The mother of small children, no matter how much she reads on child training and home making, always welcomes an opportunity to acquire more information from an authority," Mrs. Thompson said. "That is why young home makers are so enthusiastic about this conference, sponsored by the Massachusetts State Federation.

COLLEGES AIDING

"Radcliffe, Simmons, Boston University, Garland School of Home Making and the Massachusetts Society of Mental Hygiene are giving us free lectures of vital importance, bearing on our everyday home problems."

(Subjects of these lectures, with speakers, time and place, will be given in this column before the conference opens.)

"We are all eagerly anticipating the exhibit which the American Homes, Inc., is assembling for us," Mrs. Thompson went on. "Time is so limited when we shop that it will be a real boon to see the needs of our four-year-olds, or our six-year-olds—all gathered together in one spot.

PERSONAL CONTACTS

"Add to this the happy personal contacts made while working out the details for the conference and it is plain to see why young clubwomen are proud of the State Federation of American Home department, which originated the idea."

Books, clothing, games and food, classified according to age, for infant and pre-school children, will be exhibited in the hotel foyer. Tickets for the luncheon, where ideas gathered from the lecture will be discussed, should be ordered from Mrs. Lauren McMaster, 38 Yale ave., Wakefield, not later than March 16.

Count Ilya Tolstoy, son of the late Russian philosopher, Count Leo Tolstoy, will deliver his lecture on "Progress and Civilization" for the first time in New England tomorrow evening at Steinert Hall at 8 p. m.

Count Tolstoy speaks under the auspices of the Boston Community Institute as the last in its course of lectures on "Modernism and the Modern Spirit." Mrs. Milton J. Rosenau is chairman for the evening. The lecture will be preceded by a concert by Nicholas Slonimsky, composer and pianist conductor of the Boston Chamber Orchestra.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

The career of a bill in the Legislature will be told in a stereoptican talk by Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley at Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, 7 p. m. Discussion of important bills will be led by Mrs. Emma Fall Schoffield, Mrs. Sadie L. Shulman, Mrs. Leslie B. Cutler and Mrs. Frederick E. Judd. Current Events will be given by Mrs. J. H. LeFevre. A motion picture, "A Great Newspaper and How It Is Made," will be shown. Community singing will be led by Mrs. Mabel Barstow of Malden, with Gladys B. Young, pianist.

MASS. CIVIC LEAGUE

For the first time in New England the film, "Playtime" will be shown at the Twentieth Century Club, 8 Joy st., 12 noon. This picture shows what happens to children denied the right to play.

At a luncheon, 1:30 p. m. informal discussions on child welfare will be led by Miss Ida R. Parker, Mrs. Francis M. Carter, Herbert C. Parsons, Dr. Augusta C. Broner, Mrs. Wenona Pinkham, Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley, presiding.

MELROSE HIGHLANDS WOMAN'S CLUB

Guest night will be featured by a stereoptican lecture, "Inside the Lines," by Alton H. Blackinton at 8 p. m. in Melrose Highlands Congregational Church. The club orchestra and a soloist will furnish a musical program.

NEWTONVILLE WOMAN'S CLUB

American Home Committee Day will be held in Central Congregational Church, 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. Ida S. Harrington speaking on "The Kitchen and Our Daily Dozen."

HOOVER'S FARM PLAN SHOULD AID TRADE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, March 11—Congress, in a special session to be called next month by President Hoover, will attempt to deal with the farm problem.

Unquestionably, the President interprets the outcome of the election as a mandate against patent nostrums remedies, such as the McNary-Haugen bill, embodying the equalization fee provision.

In this connection, Dr. E. A. Seligman's new survey of the economics of farm relief is timely. Dr. Seligman, one of the leading economists of the country and a member of the faculty of Columbia University, was asked during the last campaign by John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to make a study of the farm situation. To emphasize the non-partisan, scientific character of the survey, Dr. Seligman withheld publication of his report until after the election. The book has just come from the press.

Referring to the McNary-Haugen program, Dr. Seligman concluded: "At best the project of attempted raising of prices is a very difficult experiment. Where the quantities dealt in aggregate such astronomical figures, even a slight error in business judgment would involve tremendous consequences. Furthermore, the very success of the attempt to raise prices would tend to set in motion those forces which might ultimately bring about an increase of supply and a lower price, so that the final outcome might be one of permanent amelioration. Even if it were possible to drive the price of wheat up to the full extent of the tariff, it would seem preferable to be content with a less extreme exercise of authority (on the part of a farm board).

"The more moderate the attempt at rise of price, the smaller would be the difficulties and the obstacles to be encountered and the greater would be the chance of success. The farm board would therefore do well, in the beginning, at least, to limit its efforts, even in the case of wheat, to the ironing out of intra-seasonal fluctuations, supplemented by a partial holding over of the crop from the next season, and to reserve for great emergencies the endeavor to control prices by utilizing the machinery of the tariff."

Thus Dr. Seligman, chosen as an outside expert by the Democratic party, does not seem to have gone far from President Hoover's position.

"The farmer's problem," Dr. Seligman points out, "is not merely part a problem of readjustment. The acuteness of the situation will disappear, as has been the case in previous periods of depression. But the pains of the transition may be alleviated by remedial action. Moreover, there remains a substantial substratum of more permanent conditions. These are at work, and potential causes of both a world and a domestic character which render the position of the farmer subject to more difficult and which tend to enhance his continued equality with industry. Governments can indeed provide no panacea, nor can it reverse the operation of factors that depend upon forces beyond its control."

Undoubtedly, Congress will be in a mood to pass some farm relief legislation. Very likely, President Hoover will be in a position to get what he wishes in this regard, for Congress on previous occasions had gone far beyond what the Administration desired. In passing the McNary-Haugen bills, which were vetoed by President Coolidge, Congress largely went its own way, despite Mr. Hoover's advice. In so far as Mr. Hoover's remedies have ameliorative effects and contribute to the prosperity of the farmer, they will increase farm purchasing power, and thus react favorably on business, especially on those branches, such as mail houses and agricultural implement and tractor concerns, which depend directly on farmer patronage.

What will President Hoover recommend? The platform on which he was elected promises the enactment of legislation creating a Federal Farm Board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system, of farmer owned and controlled corporations or associations to prevent the control surpluses through orderly distribution.

Disagreeing with Dr. Seligman's viewpoint in this particular, Mr. Hoover in his acceptance speech indicated that an adequate tariff is the basis of farm relief. Accordingly, the special session of Congress will be asked also to consider tariff changes. Mr. Hoover also added that there is no objection to method of farm relief than modernization of a system of inland waterways in order to relieve the present inadequacies of transportation. Mr. Hoover further expressed confidence that a Farm Board would create farm marketing systems, and "build up, with federal finance, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses."

Schwab Drops Bearishness; Treatment of Workers

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, March 11—Charles M. Schwab was seared of the stock market a year ago, but he isn't now.

This same conversion from bearishness to bullishness has been quite common among business men—but not among bankers. Observe the talks. It's the money that has been swinging on the bull side of the market that has caused so many people to lose the shirts they formerly felt. "Nothing succeeds like success" is essentially true in the stock market.

B. C. Forbes

Bankers who were bearish a year ago are bearish. I talked the situation over with the biggest of the bankers some little time ago and I remarked, "Well, I hope you'll be bearish no longer." He exploded: "You and I have not been exploded. Our attitude has been absolutely right. And I have not been exploded: my attitude has been absolutely right."

I smiled. I recalled the old wheeze about the soldier boy's mother at the parade who exclaimed, "There all out of step but our John." No matter how correct bearish reasoning may have been, the fact remains that stocks have meanwhile gone up and up.

At that, I simply cannot force myself to change my reasoning that a great many stocks have been sent to unwarrantedly high quotations. It may be that we are living in a "new era." Certain it is that entirely new yardsticks have been employed to measure the value of stocks. Old-time conservatism has been cast to the winds. When you venture to point out that a stock is selling at twenty times its earnings, or more, you are told with a superior air, "That doesn't matter. You must look ahead. Think of the company's prospects." And so the company's "prospects" are merrily capitalized.

What has happened this week in the market should have occasioned no astonishment. Rather will its astonishment be that it did not happen before. Under such circumstances as existed, it was inevitable that the marking-up process be vigorously resumed as soon as the market found its equilibrium.

However, Schwab may prove to be wiser than those of us who still hold to a cautious attitude.

A visit to Washington this week resulted in this observation: Calvin Coolidge has won a unique place in the hearts of the American people. The confidence and admiration he appeared to be ardent and sincere. Hoover the man has won more respect than popularity thus far. His Cabinet has evoked no enthusiasm whatsoever.

• • •

Few matters are, after all, more important than how the millions of employed in this country feel toward those employing them. Unless the majority of workers can be reasonably satisfied that they and their kind are receiving a fair deal, upheavals become, of course, inevitable. Two letters just received picture the uneven conditions now existing.

John Goodell, Lafayette, Ind., writes:

"You are doing a good work to bring before millions of readers the deplorable condition of labor and capital. But look at this picture:

"Sober, steady workmen willing to do a fair day's work are not discharged by the Monon Railroad Company because their age! Bankers some little time ago ain't remarked, 'You and I have both been wrong.' He exploded: 'You and I have not been exploded. Our attitude has been absolutely right. And I have not been exploded: my attitude has been absolutely wrong.'

I smiled. I recalled the old wheeze about the soldier boy's mother at the parade who exclaimed, "There all out of step but our John." No matter how correct bearish reasoning may have been, the fact remains that stocks have meanwhile gone up and up.

'Bootleg' Lenders Weaken Official Credit Control

NEW YORK, March 11—The persistent rise in brokers' loans for the account of others is one of the incalculable factors in the current Wall Street enigma.

To an ever increasing extent the so-called outlaw or bootleg lenders, free from supervision, are taking over quast banking functions. This development, on the one hand, constitutes a deadening blow to the financial structure, which weakens Federal Reserve control on the other. It temporarily, at least, relieves bank credit of the strain which has been imposed by the inevitable demand of the public for stocks in excess of their own ability to pay cash for them.

Five-sevenths of the increase in brokers' loans this week came from non-banking sources. Among these corporations, investment trusts, treasuries, wealthy individuals and foreign agencies. Though these bootleg loans come out of a reservoir that partakes more of the nature of capital or savings than manufactured bank credit, it still is a substitute for bank credit, and as such is a more or less subject to expansion, but without responsible control.

The New York banks, which serve as agents for the outside lenders, sought in vain to curb the bootleg lending last September by raising the commission fees and increasing the minimum amounts loaned, in accordance with a new set of clearing house regulations. Evidently the agencies whose business is concerned over the present trend, which not only represents competition but also unregulated outsiders, but also constitutes a potential threat against bank reserves.

In giving the banking viewpoint the New York Trust Company recently pointed out:

"Credit employed by corporations in the call money market can be used to purchase securities, expe ially new issues, and thus furnishes a new volume of funds to corporations which can be loaned in the regular call money market; and this process can be continued without bringing into operation the influence of a legally prescribed reserve ratio."

The foregoing statement indicates how the bank credit accounts of others really constitute a revolving fund, which can frequently be turned over, increasing their effect on the speculative price structure.

Efforts are being made by banks to induce corporations to cease lending on call, implying that there is a higher respectability to abstaining from this source of income. For example, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said: "It is the policy of a number of large well-managed industrial corporations not to make call loans."

What are the aggregate cash resources of corporations and how do they compare with outstanding loans for the account of others for the month of some $2,832,000,000?

Lawrence H. Sloan of the Standard Statistics Company, in his new volume on "Corporation Cash and Working Capital," gives an answer, saying: "It is little short of amazing to discover that our industrial corporations (probably total corporate resources of the country) were carrying cash and government securities to the extent of one-third billion dollars at the end of 1927, and that this asset item increased by nearly 9 per cent during the year, despite the sharp decline in profits and despite the fact that many of the funds so employed had out to security holders.

"It must be true, therefore, that all industrial, rail and utility companies had on hand, during 1928, in 1927, well over $7,000,000,000 in cash reserve. Perhaps the amount might run up as high as $10,000,000,000."

Mr. Sloan, speaking as a disinterested economist, derides attempts to shut off this supply of funds for stock market purposes. "To try to keep a substantial portion of this corporate cash out of all the market when rates are relatively high is well-nigh as futile as trying to sweep the sea back with a broom," he says in different words. "Corporations, when inventories are increasing rapidly, or when accounts receivable are being materially expanded (i. e., when corporations themselves are supplying an increasing volume of credit to their customers) will be different when the volume of production and payrolls are expanding. . . . When other needs do develop, the return flow of funds from the call market to corporation treasuries will be rapid and decisive."

Should it needs, such as the approaching tax due date next Friday, lead to temporary heavy withdrawals of corporation funds, which help to cause wide fluctuations in rates. At the moment, the pressure incidental to the March 15 settlement fils in with the Federal Reserve's policy of credit restriction. However, from a longer standpoint. It is a disturbing incident. Possibly, if taxes were payable in monthly, instead of in quarterly instalments, the unevenness would be ironed out to some extent. The money market will not be back to normal again until about the 20th of the month.

INVESTMENT TRUST IDEA SPREADING

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Investment trust idea, having taken firm root in this country since its tardy transplanting from the British Isles, is spreading like wildfire. You have only to study a few of the instances of its success in England or Scotland to find good basis for popularity of the investment trust. And it ought to be pointed out that the good American investment trust managers have done very much better than those overseas.

When Ford of England was offered for popular subscription, the bulk of the stock was eagerly snapped up in this country. The shares, offered at just under $5 each, were shot up to $20.62 and even now are selling at around $18. Since shares in the British Ford could triple in market value in a comparatively few days, we are afforded some idea of what might have happened had American stock brokers secured the capital stock of the Ford Co. in the United States. It will be recalled that John W. Prentiss of Hornblower & Weeks, once an office boy in State street, offered a million dollars for the Ford holdings. Later developments have indicated the offer was not too much.

John W. Prentiss.

We pointed out in this column that the American buying of the British Ford shares was not particularly pleasing to Mr. Ford, because he had planned to have the shares kept overseas to stimulate interest there. It will be a matter to watch, therefore, to see what becomes, for example, of the Belgian Ford offering. Sir Percival Perry, chairman of the board of the Ford Motor Co., Ltd., of England, in a cablegram to the Allied Capital Corp, states that 40 per cent of the total capitalization of the Ford Motor Co. of Belgium, which amounts to 100,000,000 francs, with a par value of 500 Belgian francs, is being offered for public subscription. Orders are being accepted by the Allied Capital Corp. for this stock at subscription price, plus $1.00 per share, subject to allotment.

The stock market is really a world's market today. It does not seem as if any way could be devised to keep shares in any one country, but perhaps Mr. Ford can do it. That remains to be seen. Buying in the New York stock market is from all parts of the world—selling too, for that matter.

British and Canadian executives have protested against the passing of control into foreign hands. During the World War the British government acted to prevent alien ownership of enterprises vital to the prosecution of the war, but measures successful under such circumstances are usually not adapted to the piping days of peace.

Ex-Chairman Childs of the restaurant chain last week discovered what happens when control of stock comes into the hands of one's adversaries. The ruling executives are apt to be voted out, as were Chairman Childs and Stewart.

Doubtless Mr. Ford foresaw this, and decided he would not go into enforcement as a result of the offer by Mr. Prentiss.

Curtailment of new financing is to be the next step in the campaign to correct the credit situation, according to a report in banking circles. It is estimated that from 25 to 30 per cent of collateral or so-called "brokers'" loans is made up of borrowing on new security issues.

Curtailment of new offerings, it is pointed out, would afford opportunity for bankers to firmly market new bond and stock issues they are holding. The resulting improvement in credit conditions would give added impetus to the sale of such new issues and speed the correction for which the Federal Reserve Board is working.

Conferences have been held here in the last few days between bankers, industrial leaders and brokers, it is claimed, with the idea in mind of discouraging new financing as much as possible during the immediate future. These meetings follow discussions in Washington, it is stated.

New bond offerings last week increased to $146,264,000 from $20,787,000 last week and $135,668,000 for the week ago today. This was the largest week of the year to date, despite the advance in money rates to the highest level reached in the last three years.

Foreign offerings totalled $50,000,000, Canadian issues $31,000,000, railroad obligations amounted to $20,000,000 and real estate issues totalled $23,860,000.

Among the more important offerings were the $20,000,00 Texas & Pacific Railway 5s, sold by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; the $50,000,000 Kreuger & Toll Co. 5s, marketed by the Lee, Higginson & Co. syndicate, and the $15,000,000 John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, 5½ per cent bonds, sold by the Brown Bros. & Co. group.

Another splitup of Kennecott is talked of, with large accruing profits for stockholders. Speculators also say Goodyear is in line for a big move.

Expansion and improvement of manufacturing plant and equipment in keeping with current business activity is reflected in substantial orders for electrical supplies, particularly heavy apparatus, Electrical World reports. This applies especially to the eastern district, but is true, to a large degree, of all industrial sections of the country. Sales to power companies are fairly active, with a steady call for substation equipment and line material.

In the Middle West and St. Louis areas, the volume of electrical business is expanding, with new construction a factor. Central-station companies took on a fair amount of material in the South. Large power developments have been announced in the Pacific Coast district and the outlook for business is encouraging. Cable and wire business is holding at a good level in most sections of the country.

New York financial writer sees a possibility that British as well as American stockholders of General Co., Ltd., will oppose terms of the proposed $100,000,000 additional shares. Study of Anaconda

Company Is World's Largest Producer of Copper, Silver and Zinc.

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Stock of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company is considered among the foremost of the red metal shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange and largely owned in Boston and the rest of New England.

John D. Ryan, Anaconda's chairman, recently declared his belief that higher prices for copper were well justified and not merely the result of a sudden uprush. Many look for still higher prices for the metal, along with rising prices for other leading metals, like lead and zinc.

The foreign and domestic demand for copper holds up remarkably. There are good reasons for believing 1929 will prove a banner year for the good copper companies. All of which turns attention marketwise to Anaconda as the world's largest producer of copper, as well as the world's largest producer of silver and zinc.

Anaconda has established itself in the industrial world much more firmly than most of its copper-producing rivals. Through a New England subsidiary, the American Brass Co., it secures the actual final markets for the metal.

The American Brass Co. is the world's largest manufacturer of brass and copper products, a tremendous development from the initial such undertaking in America, Paul Revere's Foster Street foundry.

Chile Copper owns the world's largest developed ore reserves. Chile is one of the lowest cost producers. Chile is controlled by Anaconda.

Other companies in which Anaconda has large reported interests are Andes Copper Co., Greene Canauea Copper Co. and Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co. Offers to the minority stockholders of all these companies are anticipated, as Anaconda expands.

Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., a new Anaconda subsidiary is expected to get control of the Inland Wire & Cable Co., general manufacturers of bare and insulated copper wire. The move is in line with broadening of Anaconda's manufacturing position.

Since Jan. 1, 1928, Anaconda has retired over $57,000,000 of funded debt. Recent raising of the annual dividend rate to $7 is expected to induce many holders to convert the remaining $10,000,000 of debenture 7s of 1938. This could reduce the total funded debt to around $105,000,000.

Railroad electrification is expected to be a big factor in keeping up the demand for the red metal.

On copper at 19 cts. a pound it is estimated Anaconda this year could earn $14.50 a share. Profits for the current year are expected to establish a new high record.

Unless disturbances arise as a result of measures to influence the supply of money for general business and the stock market, the very favorable outlook should be reflected both in 1929 earnings and in higher prices for the shares.

DENIES MOVE IS UNFRIENDLY TO AMERICANS

London, March 11 (AP)—Sir Hugo Hirst, chairman and managing director of the British General Electric Company, today cabled American stockholders of his firm seeking to allay fear as to a new stock issue planned by the company.

Sir Hugo said that in seeking to issue £1,500,000 stock to English holders only, he meant nothing unfriendly to American interested in his company. The action, he said, was just in line with the company's wish to keep control in English hands.

Although Americans own 60 per cent of the stock the company's regulations last year deprived them and other foreign shareholders of voting rights, thus assuring permanent British control. The proposed new stock to British holders only brought a storm of protest from American holders of the company's stock.

MIDDLE WEST'S PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Walter W. Head, president of State Bank of Chicago and formerly president of the American Bankers' Association, says:

"Fundamentally, business conditions in the Middle West are good. Prospects for the year 1929 are, at this time, very encouraging.

"Generally speaking, the agricultural industry gained ground in 1928. The burden of debt which it incurred during the period of inflation following the war is gradually being liquidated. Land owned and cultivated by practical farmers is generally returning a fair yield upon a reasonable value. The market for farm lands in some sections is still very limited, and, as a result, cannot absorb offerings of the so-called 'distress' land now in the hands of banks, insurance companies and others who acquired it in settlement of obligations incurred during the 'boom' days. This, however, is not primarily a part of the strictly agricultural problem.

"Repeated snow falls have provided an adequate store of moisture for the spring months. Cattle at present prices represent a loss to some feeders who were unduly optimistic when they made their purchases. On the other hand, there is a good profit in hogs and lambs at present market prices.

"Industry directly dependent upon sales in rural districts has been retarded in certain sections subsequent to January 1, by reason of unsatisfactory road conditions. This, however, is temporary and there is every reason to believe that the purchasing power of this territory will compare favorably with that of 1928 during the next several months. Generally speaking, there is a tone of continued optimism tempered by a full realization that profits in each line of activity and in each operating unit, depend upon prudent control of sales possibilities and careful analysis of operating expense. Individual enterprises are making satisfactory profits in proportion to the contribution made by their respective organizations.

"Finance problems of the Middle West are relatively simple. While the general increase in interest rates throughout the country has been felt by some individual enterprises, the burden has not as yet been sufficient to embarrass business in general. Money is available for the use of legitimate business enterprises, at rates which well-managed organizations can afford to pay."

Says Advertising Booms Candy Sales

Chicago, March 11—National advertising, particularly in daily newspapers, as a means of piquing Uncle Sam's sweet tooth and increasing the sales of candy, was extolled by Theodore W. Bunte, president of Bunte Brothers of Chicago, in making public the firm's annual report to stockholders at the annual meeting.

"The record of Bunte Brothers in 1928 indicated that a large volume of business was obtained through newspaper advertising," declared Mr. Bunte. "Analysis of sales records showed that on candy items extensively advertised during the year, increases in sales volume of as high as 72 per cent were registered, compared with 15% previous year.

"Effective merchandising, extensive distribution and efficient production were vital factors in increasing candy sales."

Stocks Replacing Bonds in Financing Building Program

By GILMORE IDEN

In a speech before the New York Steel Board of Trade just a few years ago the largest purchaser of mortgage bonds in the country voiced a warning against overbuilding. This man was an expert whose duty it was to inform himself of realty values and to handle vast sums in that field for his principals. What is more to the point, many competent authorities were at that time willing to agree with him and to caution builders to slow up.

But instead practically the entire country has continued a rapid accretion in building. The year 1926 was a record for structures erected in the United States, and 1927 did not lag far behind. During 1928 the value of construction in the United States amounted to nearly eight billion dollars. This represented an increase of 5 per cent over 1927 and 4 per cent more than 1926.

Is this upward trend to continue? Can we still expect from building that steady stimulus to the trade and industry of the country which it has afforded in recent years?

Construction is today more dependent upon public financing than at any age in the history of the United States.

"Anyone who builds with his own money (and that sometimes is done, though not often), recently said Walter Stabler who when with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company placed more mortgage loans than any man in the country, "does not need to go to the expense and trouble to borrow money for his erection. But there is comparatively little building done in that way. This was a great city of New York the entire city. I mean, not just Manhattan probably 95 per cent of it has been built by speculative builders and I think it will always be so.

"Nowadays there are buildings being projected by corporations which sell the stock just come after the first mortgage, sometimes after the second mortgage. Lately the Real Estate Board of New York has organized an exchange for the sale of real estate securities, and while it has not been completed yet and will not be for some time, the thought is that it will make a market for all these securities, both first and second mortgages, and the ownership of securities that they expect to have put on the market. If that is done, if that exchange is successful, it will make a market, it is hoped, which will make these securities more liquid than they have ever been before. If there is no market, no exchange where such things can be sold, they are difficult to sell if it is desired to realize quickly."

It may not be gainsaid that realty financing has been undergoing a radical metamorphose within the past few years. Formerly it was the practice for influential lenders to limit their loans to five years. About 10 or 15 years ago it was concluded it would be wise on safe loans, on buildings in neighborhoods where values were not likely to recede, to make long-term loans and require amortization (loan amortization depended upon the character of the buildings and the amount of the loan). They would start sometimes at the first year, and sometimes not until after the fifth year, but for all long time loans almost invariably semi-annual installments were required. It was not then the practice to take into consideration any tendency to depreciation, or if it was it was taken care of by amortization of the original loan.

Things have changed much since. A radical departure in real estate financing was recently announced by the National City Co., which in conjunction with the United States Realty & Improvement Co., proposed to do away with first and second mortgages and substitute stocks based upon the cost of the project. This stock, rather than bonds, would be sold to the public. The originators propose to supply some $130,000,000 to the building industry in the course of the next year through this plan.

If this system proves successful, and there is good reason why it should, it will place real estate financing on a strict equity basis, and put the construction industry in a position to compete with the stock market and with general business for the funds needed for continued development. That, of course, is possible as the factors in building become standardized and the equities are established upon some assured basis of probable calculation.

Borg-Warner Has Increased Profit

The first annual report of the Borg-Warner Corporation reveals that sales and earnings of each of the subsidiary companies last year were larger than in 1927. The consolidated net profit of the constituent properties in the year ended December 31, 1928, after depreciation, taxes and other charges was $4,610,831; which, after allowance for a full year's dividend on the preferred stock, equaled $7.56 a share on the 610,000 shares of $1 par value Borg-Warner stock outstanding at the close of the year. This would compare with $3,065,401 on a consolidated basis in 1927 or $5.85 a share on the same capital ization as now existing.

Body Found in Creek at Quincy Identified

The body recovered from Black's Creek, near Merrymount Park, Quincy, Saturday, was identified as that of Michael J. Hill, 62, of 212 Neponset ave., Dorchester, a former employe of the city of Boston, who had been missing since early in December. Hill, according to relatives, had been suffering loss of memory and when last seen had alighted from an Ashmont car, apparently bound toward his home.

RUSSIA USING MORE TIN

Rapid progress in renewal of Russian railway equipment is indicated by a report of the non-ferrous metals department of the Supreme Economic Council showing a great increase in tin imports. The report confirms statements made several times that large shipments of tin were being made to Russia.

Consumption of tin during 1927-28 was 5407 metric tons, an increase of 123 per cent over the 2392 metric tons consumed in 1926-27. This figure, in turn, showed an increase over the figure of 2200 tons for 1924-25.

The chief cause for this increase over an extended period of years is the re-equipment of the railways. Tin alloys in the form of gunmetal, phosphor-bronze and other yellow metals are used for bearings and packings. Locomotive boiler and engine fittings, and coach fittings all require brass, while virtually all moving parts on locomotives and cars require the alloys of this kind or another.

Recent stories from Russia indicating an attempt to build up a food canning industry may also account for a part of the increase.

Central Alloy Steel Receives Big Order

The Central Alloy Steel Corp. has received a large order for its rust-resisting product, Toncas iron, to be used as material for 11 miles of pipe required by Frederic Leaseholds, Ltd., of Trinidad, British West Indies. The pipe will be used for oil gathering lines.

RHODE ISLAND GIRL SCOUTS ENROLL IN FLAG CONTEST

BOYS and girls, schools, patriotic and civic organizations, individuals and others contemplating entry in the grand nationwide patriotic Flag Contest, being conducted by the United States Flag Association, should remember that there are only five more days left for them to enroll.

No more applications to conduct local contest units will be granted after midnight Friday, March 15.

Girl Scouts numbering several thousands in practically all sections of New England, have been enrolled to date.

Today the Girl Scouts of Rhode Island, Inc., with headquarters in Providence, have enrolled as a unit for the entire State. This means that hundreds of Girl Scouts in Rhode Island will have an opportunity of participating in the contest and, by the action of Frances E. Morse, State Director, they will be given the opportunity of competing for the amazing awards that this contest offers to the winners.

The Concord, Mass., troops of the Girl Scouts have entered, under the leadership of Lieut. E. B. Armstrong.

GIRL SCOUTS

Frances P. Carney, captain of Troop No. 3, Girl Scouts of Fitchburg, has also enrolled her troop.

The Flag Contest Editor prints today a partial list of units where girls may have an opportunity of enrolling in the Contest:

BEDFORD COUNCIL, TROOP NO. 1, GIRL SCOUTS, Mrs. G. N. Libbeyen, Captain, Box 40, Bedford.

CHELSEA COUNCIL, GIRL SCOUTS, Mrs. F. B. McClintock, Commander, 39 Nichols st., Chelsea.

SPRINGFIELD COUNCIL TROOP NO. 3, GIRL SCOUTS, Elinor M. Buck, 11 Palm st., Springfield.

MORE UNITS

WINCHESTER COUNCIL, GIRL SCOUTS, Mrs. George S. Tompkins, Secretary, Ten Glengarry, Winchester.

WESTFIELD COUNCIL, TROOP NO. 1, GIRL SCOUTS, Miss Eleanor G. Pringle, Captain, 4 Webster ave., Westfield.

The Flag Contest Editor sends the following message to the boys and girls of East Boston, that they man enroll with the Orient Heights Post No. 54, American Legion, 1038 Bennington st., East Boston, where Commander Stephen C. Sullivan is conducting a local unit.

Commander Sullivan is well known in East Boston and is a former member of the Legislature. He is devoting practically all his extra time to the formation of his unit and will be glad to aid any boy or girl who wishes to join the Contest.

To the boys and girls in Winthrop, the Winthrop Post, No. 146, American Legion, has announced that they have started a contest unit. By applying to Adj George W. Downie you may enroll.

The Brookline Post, No. 11, American Legion, is also actively engaged in conducting a contest unit. Boys and girls in that section will find that the Post's officers will be willing to assist them in enrollment.

The Flag Contest Editor urges that all applications to conduct units be made at once.

GREAT AWARDS

Your unit has the same opportunity of winning the awards as though you started weeks ago. Stop for a moment and read these awards:

1. Instead of but one boy and one girl being given the three months' cruise around the world TWO boys and TWO girls will be awarded this grand prize.

2. The regional champions—18 boys and 18 girls—who were by the original provisions of the contest to have been given a week's tour of the East, will be taken on a TWO WEEKS' tour. The trip will be extended to permit the party to visit historic spots in New England, Saratoga, New York City, Gettysburg, etc.

3. Each of the 36 regional winners, in addition to the trip to patriotic shrines will be given scholarships worth $200 each, these awards to be applied to any school, college or other institution which the winner may select or to any other purpose of an educational nature which may be chosen.

Similar scholarship awards will also be made to the boys of each region making the second and third highest marks in the contest and to the two girls from each region making the second and third highest marks. The various medals and certificates of honorable mention will also be awarded just as set forth in the original announcement.

ADVICE GIVEN

The following paragraphs show you how easy it is to form a local unit:

HOW TO FORM CONTEST UNIT OR FLAG BOARD

1. Obtain the contestants.
2. Appoint a committee to mark the papers of the contestants and determine the awards.
3. Arrange for recitation of the essays which accompany the answers to the 75 questions which are a part of the contest.

For the contestants themselves, they have only to answer 75 questions relating to the history and glory of the American Flag and the institutions for which it stands, and to write the brief accompanying essay on the subject of "Old Glory's Greatest Glory." The answers and essays go to a local committee of judges selected by the person sponsoring the local contest.

A complete list of the 75 questions will be furnished on request. All material needed for the conduct of a contest unit or Flag Board will be furnished you without cost.

Today's Flagism

restless Americans were already beginning to push their way across the western plains and mountains in an effort to find new homes in the far West. The "covered wagon days" had begun. On March 11 in that year the first white settlers left Boston for the Northwest, establishing by their journey what came later to be known as the "Oregon trail." Old Glory went with them and has since remained there as a reminder of the fighting spirit of the early pioneers, who claimed the Northwest for the United States.

DOCTORS HELD AS 'DRUNKS' IN DEATH OF BOY

Elizabethtown, Tenn., March 11 (AP)—Charges of murder, criminal negligence and drunkenness will be heard against Drs. W. H. Longmire and Murrell Pinson here tomorrow.

The charges grew out of a coroner's investigation into the death of 12-year-old Elbert Grindstaff after an operation for appendicitis several days ago.

Jim Grindstaff reported to Coroner W. T. Ferguson that the physicians told him his son needed to have his appendix removed. After the operation, he said, the surgeons told him they were "unable to find" the appendix.

The body was exhumed and Coroner Ferguson said he found evidence of the operation. He said he took from the viscera an appendix which Dr. J. B. Shoun and Dr J. L. Cottrell, who aided him in the autopsy, said was normal.

The two physicians under charges have refused to make statements concerning the case "until the proper time." Pending the hearing tomorrow they have been released under nominal bonds.

Reparation Bank Favored in France

Paris, March 11 (AP)—The idea of a giant international bank to handle the reparation payments has met with favor in France in competent circles.

An economic writer in Excelsior says it, as seems likely, the American delegation had the approval of President Hoover. The project was a promise of help in the settlement of all European debts. Perfecting of the bank scheme faced the experts at their meeting today. Its this work must be taken into account the economic and financial conditions of the various countries affected.

Woman Is Advised to Forget Childhood

By LOUISE RICE
Noted Graphologist

I HAVE had a hard life, without any education and only the worst surroundings. I have tried desperately to overcome a wild, excitable nature but the first fifteen years of my life were so terrible that sometimes I give up. I have one consolation. My husband is the most contented man I ever saw in my life and was very unhappy before marriage.

My dear woman, what you need is to have a good housecleaning of your mind! Get out the broom of courage, the soapsuds of humor and the scouring powder of pride.

turn everything out, from attic to cellar, rearrange the furniture, wash the curtains, change the pictures and throw on to the ash heap all the useless junk that you find cluttering up the rooms.

You are a housekeeper and a good one, and you will appreciate that figure of speech. That's what you need, figuratively speaking. You have what the psychologists who love to put perplexing names on ordinary things call "a fixation," meaning that you think too much of the past.

What a wonderful thing to have made a man happy, and what a wonderful thing for you that he is!

If you could read the letters that I get from women who write in despair that no matter what they do "my husband just thinks it is wrong and is always unhappy, you would thank your lucky stars, Ellen-O.

I'm not writing this merely to ease you or to give you comfort. I'm writing you the truth. Shut out the past and especially that period before you were fifteen.

It's all nonsense to say that we can't forget our childhood. We can if we wish, and if we fight to do so.

The OLD ROAD TO EN-DOR

A NOVEL COMPLETE IN SIX DAYS

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

CHAPTER 1

"GOSPORT," Andrew Streator mused in a tone that matched a look of sober thankfulness in his dark eyes. "God's port, indeed!"

He stood, bare-headed, on the doorstep, savoring the first few moments of freedom that had been granted him since his formal installation in his new parsonage.

From the doorstep the new minister looked down over the roofs of Gosport town, huddled and mostly mean about the wharves, more generously spaced and seemly as they radiated back from the waterfront and climbed gentle hillsides. The harbor beyond was long and landlocked, a fair haven for fishing fleets but too shoal to shelter steam vessels of deep-sea draught.

The new minister deeply filled his lungs. A man from inland, called from a home in the back hills of Virginia, he had never dreamed to live on such close terms with salt water.

A buggy drew up to the gate and its occupant jumped out.

"Permit me to extend a hearty welcome to Gosport, sir—in the name of the opposition shop. I'm Dr. Pentecost."

Streator unlatched the gate and came out to the path that ran between the picket fence and a rank of stately elms. He took the proffered hand with a pleasing absence of forced cordiality. "Dr. Pentecost," he punctiliously returned, but with a speculative inflexion. "Of 'the opposition shop,' did you say, sir? But surely you do not mean to suggest there could be any antagonism between our churches—whichever yours may be."

"Got none," the other crisply returned, with an amused webbing of wrinkles round his eyes. "That's the point. I'm a brand in the burning and obstinately declined to be plucked forth, Gosport's public scandal: Pentecost—M. D. not D. D.—freethinker. . . . That doesn't shock you?"

Streator smiled his grave smile and shook his head. I've seen too much wrong-doing in the world, Dr. Pentecost, to be shocked by simple wrong-headedness."

As the weeks went on and their acquaintance grew their talks came to be as long as the roads they traveled or longer.

'HIT-RUNNERS LEAVE 2 DYING IN STREET

5 HURT SERIOUSLY IN SERIES OF CRASHES

Two persons were reported dying and three others were injured in automobile accidents in Boston early today.

Miss Margaret Leston, 57, of 664 Fifth st., South Boston, was found unconscious in the street near the drawbridge on Dorcester ave., South Boston. She was taken to the City Hospital with a fractured skull, broken right leg and body bruises. Police are seeking a hit-and-run driver.

Francis Ring, 19, of Hanson st., Salem, was said to be at the point of death in Cambridge Relief Hospital, where she was taken with two companions after a sedan struck a girder on the railroad bridge in Charlestown. John Tylusiki of Milk st., Salem, was operating the sedan, according to the police. The other two injured were Michael Iwaniskim, 23, and George Gagne, 18, both of Peters st., Salem, occupants of the sedan.

Carlo Carito, nine, of 256 Sumner st., East Boston, was struck by a hit-and-run driver as he crossed Tremont st., near Scollay sq., with his mother. At the Haymarket Relief Hospital he was treated for a foot injury.

Vaccination Plea by Health Board

Although no new cases of small pox have been reported in Boston, Health Commissioner Francis X. Mahoney appealed once again today for persons not successfully innoculated during the past five years to be vaccinated.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Does the new Jones law, with its heavier penalties for bootleggers, strike at the heart of prohibition violation?

DR. ALLYN K. FOSTER, Worcester, minister—In the present pass to which bootlegging has come any penalty is a generous one. Soak 'em, and if they don't like the law let them get rid of it in lawful ways. I don't think that because a man takes a drink he is any worse than any of our other citizens but while the law is still in force in this country let those who break it pay the penalty, and a heavy penalty is better than an easy one.

LEE RICKETSON, 343 Broadway, Somerville, secretary—This country could make laws imposing heavier penalties on prohibition law violators forever and bootlegging would still go on. This law might stop some of the small bootleggers from selling but it would not scare the big ones a bit. Fully half of the people in our country like to take a drink now and then and the more laws we make prohibiting their liking the more determined they will be to get their drink.

FRANCES B. KASETTA, 159 Ames st., Brockton, secretary—I don't think that this new law would do any more towards stopping liquor law violations than our present laws. The prohibition law is looked on as more or less of a joke by a good many people, and it is almost impossible to enforce a law without the cooperation of the majority of the people. They call this the land of personal liberty, but the prohibition law does not make this statement true.

* * *

RALPH P. DENSMORE, 838 Fourth st., South Boston, taxi owner—The people of this country will have no respect for the Jones Law or any other law that they think is interfering with their rights. Why shouldn't a man take a drink if he wants to? A drink of good liquor never hurt any man. I think the government should make laws punishing the habitual drunkard severely, but they should not make laws that will affect those who drink in a moderate way.

KING CAN'T ACT FOR 2 MONTHS

London, March 11 (INS)—While the question of creating a regency for Great Britain is being considered there is no intention of doing anything immediately, it was learned from authoritative sources today.

Doctors attending King George have informed the government that it is probable he will have sufficiently recovered within the next two months to undertake important executive and State duties.

The government is opposed to the council of State which the Prince of Wales believes is functioning in an unsatisfactory manner.

However, the government is not disposed to yield to the Prince's strong wish that a regency be instituted at once.

It is stated that King George is able to concentrate for periods of 30 to 60 minutes. It was not known until recently that his long illness had left any mental effect.

A medical bulletin, issued with the sanction of the Government, gave the first news that the King's illness had left him in such condition that he could not concentrate for long periods.

HARVARD EXPERT'S FORECAST BORNE OUT IN DRY LAW ILLS

Many lawyers of note in the United States, as well as other professional men, have called pointed attention, in letters to the editors of the Hearst $25,000 temperance award contest, to the prohibition views of the late Dr. James Coolidge Carter, one-time professor of law at Harvard University.

He was one of the oldest and most eminent attorneys at the New York bar when he died nearly a quarter century ago.

Professor Carter was one of the law associates of Charles O'Connor in the prosecution of the so-called Tweed ring. He was an advocate in the famous Behring sea tribunal which met at Paris in 1893, when he rendered masterly service to the American government. He was an authority on the science of government, and is often quoted as an authority by leading lawyers today.

CONFLICT BEGINS

In lecture No. 8 of Professor Carter's great book, "Law: Its Origins, Growth and Function," (Putnam's) which comprised one entire course of lectures prepared for the Harvard Law School, the great barrister took especial pains to show some general examples of the British parliament in prohibitory legislation.

Carter made the point of showing the uselessness of legal enactments which come in contact with deep-seated customs which are in themselves not criminal.

This course, he said, "initiates an immediate conflict and the result of it furnishes a crucial test by which we may determine the comparative force of legislation and the unwritten law of custom."

He told how the English Parliament passed legislation against certain business practices between 1533 and 1766, but since these "came in contact with large general customs and the freedom of contract, and utterly failed of enforcement, by the act of 1772 they were all repealed in penitential shame."

Professor Carter then went on to say:

"The multitude of laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks, being designed to restrict their use, come in contact not indeed with universal custom, but with very common and widespread practice. It has been found impossible to enforce these, except in small rural communities, and but partly there."

TYRANNY SEEN

"The principal danger lies in the attempt often made to convert into crimes, acts regarded by large numbers, perhaps a majority, as innocent. That is the practice what is, in fact, tyranny.

"Some think that tyranny is the fault only of despots, and cannot be committed under a republican form of government, but I maintain that the maxim that the majority must govern justifies the majority in governing as it pleases, and requires the minority to acquiesce with cheerfulness in legislation of any character, as if what is called self government were a scheme on which different parts of the community may alternately enjoy the privilege of tyrannizing over each other.

"The principal evils of legal tyranny arise from the instrumentality which it employs, which is always force. What is called the tyranny of fashion, or custom, using this word in its common sense, does no great harm.

"No one is compelled to submit to it, and the penalty of being unpopular is not ordinarily very severe, but when force is called in to compel men to act in accordance with the opinions of others rather than their own, the worst mischief ensues.

"When a law is made declaring conduct, widely practised and widely regarded as innocent, to be a crime, the evil consequences which arise upon attempts to enforce it, are not to be viewed as the consequences of the forbidden practise, and not of the attempt to suppress it; and it is believed that the true method of avoiding, or doing away with, these consequences, is to press the effort, at enforcement with increased energy."

FORECAST RESULTS

As one lawyer-commentator on Professor Carter's words has observed to the Hearst newspapers the foregoing paragraph, written 25 years ago, might be uttered today to express the views of millions of Americans concerning the Jones Act, which adds perjury either to put their compatriot violators of the Volstead Act in prison for 5 years, or fine them $10,000.

Professor Carter pursues his subject:

"But when a mistake has been made, its consequences cannot be avoided by a more vigorous persistence in it. The best means of inculcating caution in this employment of criminal legislation is to have clearly in mind its evil consequences.

"The species of criminal legislation to which sumptuary laws belong furnishes an apt illustration of them."

Professor Carter, with a prescience, perspicuity and deep understanding of exactly what has come to pass in America in the last decade—since he virtually predicted it—next launches into a direct discussion of prohibition of liquor.

"Take, for instance, the case of laws prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating drinks. The evils of drunkenness are so manifest that great numbers of excellent people are impressed with a conviction that some measures must be taken to repress them.

DEPEND ON FEAR

"Evidence must be found and prosecutions set in motion, and as this is a task in which good men are commonly found to be unwilling, or too indolent voluntarily to engage, others must be sought for who will undertake it. The spy and informer are hired, but their testimony is open to much impeachment, and is met by opposing testimony often false and perjured.

"The trials become scenes of perjury and subornation of perjury, and juries find abundant excuses for rendering verdicts of acquittal or persisting in disagreements contrary to their oaths.

"The whole machinery of enforcement fails, or, if it succeeds at all, it is in particular places only, while in others the law is violated with impunity.

"I do not hesitate to say that any legislation which bears the characteristics of tyranny, as I have defined that term, is vicious in theory and has never yet succeeded, and never will succeed, in gaining its avowed end, or in having any other than an injurious effect."

BAUER SUPERB IN SPLENDID PROGRAM

By MOSES SMITH

Harold Bauer returned to Boston for one of his comparatively rare piano recitals, and he found Jordan Hall holding a large audience. As a Bauer enthusiast I might say that the larger Symphony Hall crowded to the doors, would not be too great a tribute to this artist. But as one attending concerts day to day and out through the season I realize that Bauer is too unpretentious in displaying his wares to attract the fickle populace.

His program was meaty, to put it mildly. Brahms' Sonata in F minor, Cesar Franck's Prelude, Chorale and Fugue, Schumann's Fantasia, and Mousesrgsky's "Pictures a an Exhibition." It is true that the sheer weight of this list drew many a serious musician and student. But how many hundreds were alienated who look upon a piano concert still as drawing-room entertainment!

Through most of the concert Bauer was at the height of his powers, which means that he plays with exquisite sensibility, with tonal purity and with a beauty of tone which even his constantly-voiced piano could not muzzle.

The first and last movements of the Sonata tended to dullness; not even the pianist seemed interested. But the middle movements were beautifully played.

Bauer the superb musician was speaking in the Franck music, while Bauer the poet held forth in a fine performance of the Fantasia. But some of the best playing was yet to come—in the Mousorgsky blacks-and-white etchings for the keyboard. After I had heard half of them, pressing duty called me elsewhere; for the concert was a long one, and began later than scheduled. But Bauer had made it plain that at the hands of a great pianist these "pictures" were complete by themselves, and that the Rauer orchestration is a brilliant superfluity.

Singing for the first time in Boston the Hampton Institute Chorus gave a concert at Symphony Hall under the direction of R. Nathaniel Dett. A full house applauded with considerable enthusiasm as the chorus sang a quasi-religious program, which included many of the conductor's compositions.

Take Care of Your Kidneys

Don't Neglect Kidney and Bladder Irregularities.

HAS grip or flu left you stiff, achy — all worn out? Feel tired and drowsy — suffer nagging backache, headache and dizzy spells? Are the kidney excretions too frequent, scanty or burning? Too often this indicates sluggish kidneys and shouldn't be neglected.

Thousands rely on Doan's Pills. Doan's, a stimulant diuretic, increase the activity of the kidneys and assist in the elimination of waste impurities. Are endorsed everywhere. Ask your neighbor

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:

Harry Norton, 5916 S. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., says: "After a severe cold, the kidney excretions passed too frequently and contained sediment. I had dizzy spells, headaches and felt tired most of the time. I felt stiff and lame, too, and could hardly straighten because of the soreness across my back. The use of Doan's Pills brought me quick relief and I must speak well of them."

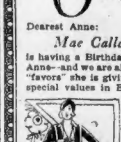
Dearest Anne:

Mae Callaghan

Is having a Birthday Party Sale, Anne—and we are all invited. For "favors" she is giving some very special values in Easter frocks.



At $13.95 she has Peasant prints, Lighting Blocks prints, combinations in ensembles and irresistibly "different" styles. The one sketched is adorable—navy georgette piped in red—and only $13.95! And wait till you "feast" on the spicy group specially priced at $9.45! Natty tweed ensembles, with silk blouses, "hanky" style prints, snug hips, and navy georgette over polkas. There is also a stunning group of women's dresses, these in plain crepes and prints, priced at $12.95. Mae Callaghan, Inc., is located at 51 and 53 Temple Place, with a Boutique in the Arcade. Don't miss this party, Anne! Sizes 14 to 42.

Varicose Veins

and ankle swellings are impossible with Easter finery. So why not arm yourself against these disfigurements with Dr. Saul's silk elastic stockings? They are of the lightest weight, flesh color, seamless and knitted in heel. Made and guaranteed to withstand swelling. They are almost invisible, and priced $6.75 each—which makes them just the stocking you were looking for. Out-of-towners find their mail orders promptly and satisfactorily filled. Fitted-to-measure arch support shoes in all styles are priced $8.50. Dr. A. P. Saul, Chiropodist, specializes in foot troubles of all kinds, and is located at 110 Tremont St., Room 312.

Here's Real News, Anne

about things dearest, and—nearest—our hearts—Silk. Undies! I'm so excited about this wonderful find I simply must tell you about them. Just imagine—gorgeous crepe de chine dance sets for only $1.68! Lace trimmed, tailored, or ribbon-bow-piped, and come in a riotous array of luscious colors, unbelievable values at $1.68! Dainty lace-trimmed "slightlies" are only $2.98, and softly-tailored styles are $2.38. And the stockings! Uummh! Beautiful picot top and heel, chiffon and full silk from top to toe are only $1.28; service weights, exceptional quality, $1.98, and the new two-pointed black heel in gunmetal are rare bargains at $1.58. You'll find them all in the Shop of Irregulars, 9 Avery St.

Wedding Bells Chime

for Mary D., and being a most practical little lady she has decided not to spend a lot of money on something she will use only once—her wedding gown and well! So she is going to get it at Mendelsohn's, 39 Temple Place, where they are having a lot of both new and used bridal gowns, in the most alluring styles. And here's good news for her wedding guests—Mendelsohn's—who rent bridal gowns, evening gowns and wraps is offering for sale some of their slightly used evening gowns, in all the latest styles, for only $5 and some at $3 each—or 2 for $5. A wonderful opportunity to buy an extra evening gown or two.

Since It's Smart

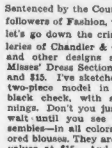
to be thrifty, Anne, I'm feeling quite proud, because I've unearthed some marvelous values in kid gloves. Saturday Jean and I decided we positively must have some of the new sun-tan kids so popular now, but in practically every store we visited they were priced $3. Finally, I was struck by the happy thought—the Touraine Glove Co.! And, just as I expected, we found exactly the gloves we wanted for only $2.95. They are beautiful, Anne—imported—and of the softest, long-wearing kid—and all hand embroidered. They come in all the wanted colors, with striking bits of appliqués or petit point on the cuffs. At their three stores—11 Avon, Wash. at Winter and 146 Tremont Street.

Scott's—New England's Largest Fur Establishment

announces a unique clearance of only 183 fur coats which include samples, floor models and slightly used fur coats, offering them at prices that range from $15 to $75—nothing higher. This group includes Muskrats, Seal Dyed Conies, Caraculs, Ponies, Beaver Dyed Conies, Raccoons, etc. Some of them require slight repairing—that is why they are offered at such ridiculously low prices. To prove the value of these coats, at such unbelievably low prices, Scott Furriers will accept them back next season, and allow you all you have paid in exchange for a new Scott fur coat. So you see, you may have the use of a fur coat this winter, and it will cost you nothing. Should it be inconvenient for you to pay cash, though you may if you wish to, you may open a 30, 60 or 90-day charge account, or you may arrange for small weekly or monthly payments while wearing your coat, by joining Scott's Unique Fur Club, the only one in New England. There are plenty of large sizes and the sale is taking place on the third floor of Scott's Building, 69 Summer St. While on the second floor, the first arrival in Boston of models for coats are to be found priced from $95 to $295, according to fur. Scott's Furriers remain open every evening until 8 P. M.

A Checkered Career for Prints!

Santenced by the Court of Spring Fashion, Anne! So being dutiful followers of Fashion, with just a dash of good New England Thrift let's go down the crimson carpeted stairway to the Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co., where a lively array of prints in checks and other designs await us in the Misses' Dress Section, priced at $12.75 and $15. I've sketched one pert little two-piece model in charming navy and black check, with saucy bow trimmings. Don't you just adore it? But wait until you see the checked ensembles—in all colors—with plain colored blouses. They are truly marvelous values at $15. And the new balloon prints—great spots of bright colors on a dark background. They are stunning! And the styles are captivating. You know how most girls love the new gypsy hipline—tightly swathed—well, you'll find plenty of these—and some very flattering scarf and cape collar effects. But of course, we can't overlook the important Navy georgettes. They are also priced at $15—and one striking model is edged with myriad tones of blue. There are many other georgettes and silk crepes and some printed combinations as gorgeously colorful as a garden of Spring flowers, all waiting to be "plucked" in the Misses' Dress Section of the Spanish Galleries, priced $12.75 and $15.



The Charm of a Bit o' Lace

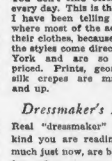
at Milady's swanlike throat has been the song of poets ever since Mrs. Caveman discarded her furry frock for one of cloth, Anne. And now with the return of the utterly feminine type—soft curves and curls—we find all the new Spring frocks bearing the sweetly irresistible and very fashionable lingerie touch of lace in collars and cuffs. If your new frock does not boast this important new touch, there is but one thing to do—visit Filene's Neckwear Section (street floor), where you will be enchanted, as I was, with their wonderful selection of fine lace collar and cuff sets at only $2.00. They have many patterns in two styles—one for the high round neck, has a wide collar, deeply pointed, and with the new jabot effect. The cuffs to match are trim and narrow. The "V" neck collar is narrower, and has a tiny frill of net at the edge. The cuffs are the deep gauntlet style—so flattering to the hands. These sets come in ecru color, some having inserts of Point d'esprit. And Anne! Did you ever stop to consider the magical effect a lace collar and cuff set has in restoring the pride of a long-used frock? Positively glorifying! When you see these exquisite sets in Filene's for only $2 I'm sure you'll agree with me.

Cleansing Special $1

Pack your soiled clothes—dresses (silk or cloth), coats, hats, in fact everything that needs to be cleansed and take them to the Metro Dress Shop, 309 Tremont St., where Jack Blatt, the owner, is offering a special Spring Cleaning price of only $1.00 for cleansing and pressing any garment that's a wonderful opportunity to freshen up your last season's wardrobe? You don't find offers like this every day. This is the little shop I have been telling you about, where most of the actresses buy their clothes, because they know the styles come direct from New York and are so reasonably priced. Prints, georgettes and silk crepes are marked $3.75 and up.

Dressmaker's Models

Real "dressmaker" frocks—the kind you are reading about so much just now, are being offered for sale, at remarkably low prices—some only $12—at Mme. Rolleau's Salon, Room 306, 59 to 61 Temple Place. These are all individualized styles—models designed and created by Mme. Rolleau herself, for manufacturers to repeat in their ready-to-wear dresses. They are all far-advanced in style, and beautifully made. Mme. Rolleau's Salon, is in connection with the famous McDowell School of Dressmaking, which is is now under Mme. Rolleau's new management, and classes are now open in drafting, designing and home sewing for the wide-awake girl.



What Do You Think

I saw at the theater last night? A winsome young lady friend and when I raved at how marvelous her hair looked she told me she was wearing a transformation! Her own hair is scraggly and thin, and really spoils her whole appearance, so she covered it up with a most becoming golden blonde transformation, which she bought at Gilchrist's Beauty Shop. You know they are offering a special sale of fine French transformations, ventilated, and with a slightless part. In natural colors they have been reduced from $30 to $22.50; and in gray from $35 to $26.50. Really, Anne, these transformations cover a multitude of gray hairs, barren spots and growing ends.

Here's a Gift For You

Anne—bearing all the joy of Springtime—a sweet-voiced songbird in a brass cage! To celebrate the opening of their new Cambridge store, the Lenox Jewelry Co. are giving away all this week a famous Hartz Mountain Male Singing Canary in a Hendays brass cage to everyone who makes a purchase amounting to $25 or over. They carry the best quality nationally known watches, diamonds, jewelry and silverware, at most appealing prices, and best of all, they offer extended charge accounts. I know you will be interested. Lenox Jewelry Co. are located at 381 Washington St., Boston; 617 Mass. Ave., Cambridge (Central Sq.) and 153 Main St., Brockton.

What's Your Hobby?

Golf — motors — music or dogs? Whatever it is you can create quite an "impression" by having your monogram combined with an illustration of your hobby and engraved upon your stationery. This is quite the latest and smartest of stationery creations — and soon something brand-new to Boston. These fascinating monograms engraved on steel dies cost but $6.50. Individualized designs made to order at correspondingly low prices. It is a modern cost-of-arms, Anne, that makes a delightful Easter gift with a "personal touch"! You'll find them in the stationery section of Jordan Marsh Company (street floor, annex).

Threads of Spun Gold

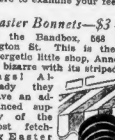
captured in the sunlight are no brighter and more glorious than our own Peggy's hair since she has been using Flozor, that extraordinary "brightener," prepared by Parisian chemists in France by Leo Lion Dubois. As it is neither a dye nor bleach, but a "brightener," there is no danger of discoloring the scalp. Flozor is applied on a bit of cotton drawn over strands of hair. It lends color and life to natural shades—blonds hair becomes a gleaming halo—and the hidden lights in brunette locks are set afire when Flozor is used after the shampoo. It is sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson Co. Price $2.50 a bottle.

Perfect Foot Comfort!

You can avoid the use of foreign appliances such as arch supports, or anything you may have to "put into" your shoes for foot comfort, by wearing Dr. Saklad's patented Metatarsal Support Shoes. They have all the features that you can't "built" right into them — assuring perfect foot comfort. These shoes come in various styles for men, women and children, and many of Dr. Saklad's customers who hobbled in with their uncomfortable appliances have left in perfect comfort with his Metatarsal support shoes on. Dr. Saklad's Shoe Shop is located in the Little Bldg., 50 Boylston St., Shop 4, and you may order by mail. Dr. Saklad is always there to examine your feet.

Easter Bonnets—$3 & $5

at the Bandbox, 568 Washington St. This is the most energetic little shop, Anne—and so bizarre with its striped awnings! Already they have an extra advanced supply of the most fetching Easter millinery. Soft French Felts, Visca, new straws and combinations are priced astonishingly low for their exceptional workmanship. You'll find no ordinary, everyday styles here, Anne, but the smartest and most unusual, with a touch that makes them look double their price for only $3 and $5. They come in a glorious maze of spring colors, with plenty of the very smart navy and black.



And Easter Frocks!

as breezy and new as the brisk March wind that blew me into Evelyn's Dress Shop, 5 Winter St., Anne! Trust Evelyn to have the latest first. She has cape styles, "sea-going" ensembles with pert little "button-on" skirts, in navy crepe and other important colors. Georgettes and sweet, graceful-dipping evening gowns, and an eye-filling array of the latest prints that are wonderful values at $12.95 and up. Besides the $8.95 rack, which includes the most astonishing group of prints and silk crepes that I have seen at that price, Evelyn has selected a small group of silks and wool tweeds which she has marked down to $5. You must see them.

Devotedly yours,
Priscilla

ZERAMBY IN GO WITH FARR

Hambone Kelly to Toss His T N T Socks at Big Boy Burlap

By JACK CONWAY

LARRY (Big Boy) RAWSON of East Boston will try to continue his drive toward the pugilistic heights when he clashes with Bob Mills of Franklin, N. H., in a 10-round bout at the Arena A. C. show at the Boston Arena tonight.

Rawson, a youth of 18, has proved a riot in local rings. He has won 12 bouts in a row, 12 of them by knockouts. Terry Mitchell [illegible] who has been able to go [illegible] with Rawson. Big Boy later knocked Terry stiff.

One will get a real line on Rawson tonight, as Mills is a seasoned campaigner. He is heavyweight champion of New Hampshire and has beaten some sturdy opposition.

Jack Conway

Mills, a member of Harry Kelly's stable, is a big, powerful chap, has a good fighting heart and the kick of a mule in his right.

There are many keen observers of ringic affairs who are of the opinion that Mills is too experienced for a raw youngster like Rawson. The crowd though, will be with Big Boy. His spectacular run of knockouts have made him a real favorite with the fans who like action. He will probably go to the post a betting choice tonight.

THERE is almost as much interest in the ten-round semi-final between Jake Zeramby of Lynn and Johnny Karr of Cleveland as there is in the mixup between Rawson and Mills.

Zeramby is one of the promising featherweights in the country. Boxing in southpaw style, he has battered his way through some sturdy opposition. He has one of the largest followings of any Jewish boxer in New England. He will have plenty of support behind him when he steps into the ring tonight. The ring delegation will be headed by a band.

Farr is one of the leading featherweights in the country. An idea of his ability may be gained from the fact that he had Chick Suggs on the floor five times when the New Bedford warrior was in his prime.

FREDDY O'CONNOR of South Boston will draw Hy Diamond of the West End as an opponent in an eight round mill which is certain to furnish action.

Hambone Kelly of South Boston will strut his stuff in a six-round whirl with Big Boy Burlap of Waterbury, R. I., while Johnny Daley of Waltham, former amateur champion, will oppose Johnny Scully of South Boston.

Col. Bob McKirdy announces there will be popular prices of from 50 cents to $3.

As it is a fine fighting card, and the only show of the week, the Arena should be jammed.

Schmeling May War With Paolino in June

New York, March 11—Tom McArdle, matchmaker for the Madison Square Garden, has announced that Paolino Uzcudun, Basque woodchopper, will probably fight Max Schmeling, German heavyweight contender, at the Yankee Stadium in the latter part of June.

While it is not certain as yet whether or not Schmeling can get back to this country before the tentative date of the fight, it was said that the pact will be O. K. are good enough for the Madison Square Garden officials to angle for the necessary signatures of the fighters.

BRAVES DECK STACKED AGAINST CARDS IN EXHIBITION GAME

BRUCE CUNNINGHAM

Bruce is one of the best of the candidates for regular Brave pitching berths. He has gone well in his work to date. The entire Braves pitching squad seems to be on the way up this year. Weak early season pitching has been the cause of many failures of the Braves in past years.

FREDDIE MAGUIRE—JOHNNY EVERS

Maguire and Evers are quite friendly. Evers was the Braves second baseman in 1914, when the Tribe won the title. Jawn teamed up with Rabbit Maranville then. Maguire also is a second sacker. He used to play for Holy Cross.

FREDDIE MAGUIRE

Here is the former Crusader taking a cut at the ball. He puts his body right into the swing. Maguire will give the Braves a real high grade fielding second baseman this year. Hornsby is a better hitter than Maguire, but was not so good as a fielder with Boston.

WOODSIES IN NEED OF THREE FORWARDS

By BILL McALLEY

Amateur defeat is chalked up for the Woodsies, and at the expense of Philadelphia, a team which hadn't won a game on the road before.

It is quite some time now since the locals have come through with a victory, but this is to be expected with the team Woodsies carry at present.

The Woodsies are very much in need of three good forwards who can find the net, and until they get them they will be on the losing column most of the time.

TWO FAST FORWARDS

Dave McEachern and Scotty Nilsen are the only class A men on the club, and two forwards can't win games.

The defense, with Davidson, Gibson, McIntyre, McArthur, Adams, Fleming, Dubienny and Ballantyne, can hold its own with the best of them, providing the front rank does its share.

Fall River is still leading the second half, the Marksmen defeating the Phillies at Tiverton. It would be interesting if the Marksmen went out and grabbed this half after sewing up the first half.

The Threadmakers gave the Nassosis a bad beating at Pawtucket Saturday, Harvie, McAuley and Bates outscoring the cup-holders by four goals.

The Nats fared better against Brooklyn, however, Viberg's charges holding the Agarites to a tie.

WHALERS STOPPED

The Whalers are finding the going rather tough, Brooklyn holding them to a tie Saturday and Providence defeating them at Providence.

Dave Pomfret will start another shakeup in the New Bedford team if the players fail to deliver. Red Ballantyne and Andy Stevens would look good in the Whaler lineup right now.

Miss Sigourney to Defend Tennis Title

Of the 29 entrants in the women's national indoor tennis championships under way today at the Longwood covered courts, more than half were from the Greater Boston district.

Most of the leading players are South at the present time.

Miss Edith Sigourney, last year's titleholder, was out to defend her honors. Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, Jr., runner-up to Miss Sigourney, was the favorite to win this year.

Four of the players that are to compete are seeded: Mrs. Charles Hubbard, 4; Miss Margaret Blake, 2, Mrs. Mary Lamme, 3, and Mrs. W. M. Shedden, 4. Local tennis lovers remember Mrs. Lamme when she was a student at Wellesley College. At present she makes her home at Rye, N. Y. Mrs. Barger Wallack, who won the national outdoor title in 1905, comes from Jerico, L. I., for the tourney.

Conqueror of Genaro to Box in Toronto

Toronto, March 11 (INS)—Emil Pladner, the crack French flyweight who recently stopped Frankie Genaro in one round, probably will fight here in June against the winner of the Corporal Izzy Schwartz-Frenchy Belanger bout here tomorrow night. According to Playfar Brown, local matchmaker, Belanger, the Canadian champion, is favored to defeat Schwartz, who is recognized as world's champion in New York State.

Billy Barton in Fine Shape for Race

Wroughton, England, March 11 (AP)—Billy Barton, American steeplechaser, has returned here in fine condition from Tenby. Racing begins at Cheltenham Course tomorrow, and it is understood Billy will keep his engagement there Wednesday. The frost is said to be entirely out of the course.

Hungaria Has Edge

New York, March 11—Hungaria team downed the Philadelphia Centennials by a score of 3 to 1 in an Eastern league game here, after leading at the interval by 1 to 0.

Goodreau May Coach Malden Grid Team

There is a strong chance that Ed Goodreau, present Malden high baseball coach and assistant to Coach Batchelder in football last fall, will be announced shortly as the football mentor for the season of 29.

Goodreau is a teacher at Malden high and has had sufficient experience for the job. He is popular with the boys and would make a fine head coach.

Three Rifle Teams Tied in Title Shoot

Northfield, Vt., March 11—Norwich, M. I. T. and Boston University were revealed as leaders in the New England Intercollegiate Rifle league when results of the matches fired during the second week of the schedule were received here.

With two victories each, the three teams are tied for top place. Second week contests brought victories to Norwich over Amherst, 1262 to 1112; B. U over N. Y. State A. A., 1284 to 1073, and M. I. T. over Cooper Union, 1347 to 1082.

Six Weeks of Practice for Penn Gridmen

Philadelphia, March 11 (AP)—Six weeks of football practice, starting today, is planned by Coach Lou Young for the University of Pennsylvania squad.

Heretofore spring practice has lasted for only three weeks, but the loss of 14 lettermen, including five players who were regulars for three seasons, made it necessary, Young said, to lengthen the period of instruction.

BRADDOCK AND SLATTERY BOX TONIGHT

New York, March 11 (AP)—Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo 175-pounder, and Tom Heeney, the New Zealand blacksmith, are the big question marks on the national pugilistic horizon this week.

Slattery, possibly the fastest of all the light heavyweights, comes back to Madison Square Garden tonight to meet the stiff punching Jersey City counter-fighter, James J. Braddock.

Slatteryl has not appeared in New York since December, 1927, when he dropped a close decision to Champion Tommy Loughran. As a matter of fact, he has fought very little anywhere else since that night.

His match with Braddock should indicate whether Jimmy Still is to be ranked among the light-heavyweight contenders. Braddock has developed in sensational fashion in recent months. After knocking out Tuffy Griffith of Sioux City, Ia., in two rounds, Braddock came a cropper before the superior stamina of Leo Lonski, to whom he lost a decision on points.

Heeney, announced by Gene Tunney in a championship battle here last sumer, and decisively beaten by the Boston "Fat Boy" Jimmy Maloney about 10 days ago in the first start of his second American tour, engages Otto von Porat, Norwegian slugger, in a 10-round match at the Chicago Coliseum tomorrow night.

This bout may, or may not decide Honest Tom's "fistic" future one and for all. Against Maloney the New Zealander scarcely appeared to advantage. Von Porat, as hard a puncher in the ins the division figures to win.

Soccer Results

Fall River 3, Philadelphia 2.
Providence 3, New Bedford 2.
Brooklyn 3, Nationals 3.
Rangers 6, Hispano 3.
Hungarians 5, Centennials 1.
Hakoahs 4, Giants 2.

Ed Morris Faces 2nd Season Handicap

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 11—Pitchers who hang up great records during their first season in the majors usually fall down badly the second year.

It may be because they grow overconfident. It may be because they allow success to go to their heads and fail to keep in condition.

It may be because the opposing batters, after a season's experience, are better able to connect with their deliveries.

The Sox have an example on the club now in the person of Horace Lisenbee, secured from the Senators in the Myer deal. This young right-hander looked like one of the greatest hurlers in the business back in 1927, his first year in the majors.

The Sox also have the prize rookie hurler of the 1928 season in big Ed Morris.

The odds are very much against him turning in as remarkable a record this year as he did last, but big Ed has no fear of the jinx. He confidently expects to have a better season than his first one.

"I know all about the second-year jinx," says Morris, who really speaks much better English than he is generally given credit for, even though he has a decided southern drawl, "but it isn't worrying me in the least.

"I was never in better shape in my life. A winter of teaching baseball in the Canal Zone has left me in 100 per cent better physical condition than when I reported last spring.

"And I truly expect to have more stuff on the ball this season than ever before.

"I made up my mind at the close of last season that I would need more stuff to win this year. You know you may fool all big league batters some of the time, and some big league batters all of the time, but you can't fool all big league batters all of the time.

"I have developed a 'sailor' which I can break either in or out and which ought to prove a wow as a change of pace ball.

MORRIS NOT WORRYING

"I had considerable trouble pitching to left handed batters last season. I am trying a new delivery which I think will overcome that weakness, also.

"But, boy, I still feel just as good as the other fellow; am in perfect shape, and believe that I have improved as a pitcher. With the stronger support I am certain to have this season. I see no reason why I shouldn't turn in more victories than in '28. If I get a fair share of the breaks, watch me go!"

Big Ed meant every word he said. He is a confident chap, but not a bit conceited. He has acquired a lot of hard common sense during his long connection with the game. He predicts success this season, fully realizing what he will be up against.

The odds, as we have said, are against him. They are always against any pitcher, except a star on a pennant-winning team, winning 30 ball games.

Yet Morris may come through. We can vouch for the fact that he hasn't let success go to his head, and also that he is in fine physical shape, much better than he was in last spring.

As to his new deliveries, we can't say, because he hasn't cut loose yet. If what he says about them is true, he should stand a very good chance of overcoming the jinx and having a second year as good as the first.

TRIBE GETS REAL TEST THIS WEEK

Spring Battles Will Show Value of Players Now Chasing Berths

By NICK FLATLEY

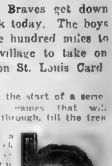
Avon Park, Fla., March 11

The 1929 Braves get down to real work today. The boys hussed some hundred miles to reach this village to take on the champion St. Louis Cardinals.

This marks the start of a series of exhibition games that will stretch right through, till the free [illegible] begin.

It will be a very busy week and by the [illegible] board of [illegible] ers will [illegible] pretty well idea of just what's what in this new ball club.

The Washington Senators come to St. Pete tomorrow and that affray will be followed by three games with the Yanks at Water Front Park, [illegible] the home training grounds are called. Then the Tribe plays Saturday and Sunday with Washington at Tampa.



Nick Flatley

"We will try to win these exhibition games," Judge Fuch admits. "But we will not take any chance of ruining a player to get a verdict. We will try out the entire squad in these contests. We must do a little cutting down soon, and big league competition will give us the chance to measure up our prospects properly.

"I have never seen a team in the South in such good shape at this time as the Braves. The boys are all raring to go, and there isn't anything like a serious injury on the squad. We will take things easy from here in, so that we can land home with everybody fit.

Much of our misfortune of the past few years was due to bad starts in the spring. This year we'll be in the right shape, and may get off on the proper foot. Once we get rolling, we'll be hard to stop. I have learned to shy off being optimism, but I think this time we are going places."

BRANDT PITCHES

Big Ed Brandt and Kent Greenfield will do the pitching in this opening war. The large southpaw, who was sick much of the time last summer, has had a complaint from his innards this spring.

He has been dieting carefully, and despite his illness, was as hard as the next one, he has packed several pounds down here.

Kent, despite his illness, was a mighty good pitcher in '28. He should be a real star in the campaign unless things go wrong with him once more.

Greenfield, a sensation two years ago, was a disappointment last season. He grabbed the flu in the spring and never seemed to recover from it all through. The knuckle chucker spent the winter hunting and leading the outdoor life, and is lean and lithe as a greyhound.

His fast one has had plenty of zip in his two practice appearances with the Yankigans.

SHIFTS PLAYERS

Judge Fuchs intends to do a bit of shifting today. He will start Farrell at short and then send the Rabbit in there. Meuller will be left fielding at the opening, but Al Moore will get a crack at the spot in mid-game.

Little Moore, who looms like a sure enough star in the outfield, will do some second baseing vice Maguire, and a couple of catchers will perform.

Hennery Gowdy, assistant right eye, remained back in St. Pete and took what athletes were left at home out for a long workout. Hennery is ready to do some catching himself, but will not see service in these games.

The club has six catchers besides Hennery and at least three of them must get the air. So they will have a lot of exercise scrapping for jobs these next couple of weeks.

Today's lineup was announced by Judge Fuchs as follows:

Rothbourg, rf; Maguire, 2b; Sisler, 1b; Bell, 3b; Clarke, cf; Meuller, lf; Farrell, Collins and Taylor, c; Brandt and Greenfield, p.

School Regimental Track Games Best in Years

ENGLISH HIGH HAS TITLE CLINCHED

By DICK McSWEENEY

English high school clutches the Regimental track crown in a strong grasp, even though 11 other groups of striving athletes sought to cut down the Blue and Blue's huge lead at the Regimental meet Saturday.

Due to the Blue and Blue's predominant position in the matter of qualifying men for Saturday's finals, there was a total absence of the usual speculation as to which team would win the meet.

So the spectators who had come to the meet, knowing well that English could not be defeated by any possible turn of circumstances, hoped that they could get a thrill out of seeing records fall.

They were not disappointed. John J. Tosney of Mechanic Arts clipped one-fifth of a second off the intermediate hurdles record when he bobbed up and down over the sticks to finish in 6 4-5 seconds.

John Toomey, however, was not the only proud person present in the big drill shed on East Newton st.

Caswold Eastmond of English nearly burst with pride when he learned that he had equaled the old mark of 6 4-5 seconds in the senior hurdles.

SCOTT EQUALS MARK

Jack Scott of Trade school flew down the stretch in the intermediate 50-yard dash in the time of six seconds flat, equaling the record.

Constantino Satchabell thought it only right that Brighton should not be left out in the cold when it came to equaling records, so he breezed through the senior dash in 5 4-5 seconds.

Augustus C. McLennan of Mechanic Arts equaled the record in the senior 600.

Persons who had not taken part in the meet, yet found good reason to be proud, were Fred J. O'Brien and William Small, assistant directors of physical education in the Boston public schools.

The meet was run off in an orderly fashion under the direction of these two gentlemen, who took good care that there were no hitches or hesitations in the program.

JUDGES O. K.

The judges deserve credit also. Not once in the long afternoon of competition was a single protest registered because of their rulings.

The meet can be marked down as a complete success from every angle. It is to be hoped that future meets and athletics in the Boston public schools will be run off as smoothly and as capably.

While the crowd was rushing from the East Armory on Saturday after the close of the meet, a lone figure stood out on the drill floor, figuring out the point score on his program, James Holland, coach of the Mechanic Arts track team.

He stated that Mechanic Arts was in third place, close behind Latin school, and also expressed confidence that the Artisan relay team would win on Wednesday, thereby giving Mechanic Arts second place.

Hubba Collins, Medford's football coach, was at the East Armory on Saturday and acted as one of the judges.

Joe McKenney of Boston College was at the Regimental meet in the East Armory last Saturday.

The Eastern Massachusetts board of basketball officials hold their annual banquet at the Hotel Commodore, Cambridge, tonight. All the prominent court officials and coaches are expected to attend the affair.

Forty candidates for the Huntington school baseball nine are working out daily in preparation for the strenuous season ahead.

The Red and Black ball players open their season on April 16 and wind up on May 25. The schedule: April 16, Harvard 2nds; April 20, Dorchester Academy; April 24 Thayer Academy; April 27 Moses Brown; May 1, Milton Academy; May 3, Lynn General Electric; May 4, B. U. Freshmen; May 8, Tufts Freshmen; May 9, Wentworth Institute; May 15, Lawrence Academy; May 22, Andover Academy; May 25, Worcester Academy.

Bob Johnson, rangy center of the Stoneham high basketball team, has been elected captain of the quintet for the season of 1930. Bob Sheehan, star goaltender of the Stoneham hockey six, has been elected to pilot the puck-chasers next season.

ELKINS UNDER BAN; HARVARD'S CHANCES SLIM

With Tubby Jackson and Billy Elkins, Harvard's goalies, definitely out of the hockey play because of probation in studies, Coach Joe Stubbs announced today that he would start Hank Newell in the Harvard sanctuary in the third and final game of the Harvard-Yale hockey series at New Haven on Wednesday night.

Both Jackson and Elkins were put on probation by the dean's office at Harvard and the Crimson mentor will be forced to start a green goalie in the crucial game on Wednesday. The loss of these two goalies practically kills Harvard's chances of defeating Yale in this great hockey series.

Jackson was put on probation yesterday and Elkins fell under the ban this morning. With Jackson out it was expected that Elkins could hold the Harvard fort in a satisfactory manner.

Newell has played very little hockey at Harvard and will be starting his first major game.

Despite the fact that Newell is now a senior he has played very little hockey for the Crimson. He failed to make the coveted job on his freshman team, was cut from the varsity squad in his sophomore year and only was retained to that squad this year because of the unknown ability of Jackson.

Harvard will practice twice before the coming game at New Haven. In both these sessions the Crimson must learn the tricks of a varsity goal tender. Should he fail in this Yale has this great series already bottled up.

The Harvard hockey squad will leave for the third and final game of the series with Yale on Wednesday morning, arriving in New Haven about noon.

St. Bonaventure On Okeson's List

St. Bonaventure, N. Y., March 11 (AP)—Fred V. Ostergren, athletic director of St. Bonaventure's College, announced today that the athletic association here had joined the Eastern Association for Selection of Football Officials as an associate member. Walter Okeson of Lehigh University is head of the association.

Under the Okeson plan officials for football games played by colleges who hold memberships are appointed by him. The selection is neutral and is expected to do away with wrangling between school over the selection of referees and umpires.

Woodfull Star of Cricket Match

Melbourne, Australia, March 11 (AP)—With England's first innings over for 519 runs, Australia went to bat today in the fifth test match and had scored 152 runs for the loss of two wickets at the close of the days play.

W. M. Woodfull is 78, not out, was today's batting feature, Leyland of England ran his Saturday score of 119 up to 137 before being caught by Fairfax this morning.

Tech Court Team Had Good Record

The season just closed was one of the most successful ever enjoyed by a Technology basketball team, with eight wins out of 11 starts.

Up to the mid-year examination period, the Engineers had a string of six victories without an upset, winning over such teams as Boston University, Manhattan, Brown and Harvard.

MOREY STARTS B. U. NINE ON STEADY WORK

The first week of intensive baseball practice for Boston University's diamond aspirants will get underway at the St. Botolph st gym today when Coach Morey holds a practice session for both battery and fielding candidates.

For the past two weeks practice sessions have been held every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday and for battery men only. Beginning today, the candidates for mound and backstop duty will be called out every day and the infielders and outfielders three times a week.

Coach Morey hopes to have the team outside in another week for batting practice and in order to do this the pitchers must be rounded into shape this week in order to be ready to take their turn on the mound when the word to go outside is given.

The letter men on the squad reported last Friday and were given a brief talk in which the new coach outlined his plans for the coming campaign. Morey thinks the Pioneers are in for a good season if the team can develop batting strength.

Scribner Is Ahead in Bowling Totals

New York, March 11 (INS)—Joe Scribner, Detroit bowler, led Mort Lindsey of Stamford, Ct., by a score of 8719 to 8588 today, at the conclusion of the fortieth game of their sixty-game match for the world's match championship. Scribner increased his lead to 361 pins by winning yesterday's block of ten games here, 1945 to 1928.

Training Camp Flashes

Clearwater, Fla., March 11 (AP)—For the first time in years, Wilbert Robinson, president-manager of the Brooklyn Robins, is a bit worried over his pitching staff.

This year Robinson is not even sure that he will have good pitching. Dazzy Vance, if he can be persuaded to sign a contract, and Doug McWeeny will be the backbone of the staff, of course, but when this pair is named the Robins stock of consistent winners is exhausted.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 11 (AP)—The Phillies began their two-a-day program today, somewhat jubilant over their one-sided victory yesterday in their first regular game of the training season.

Ft. Myers, Fla., March 11 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics returned to their home base here today somewhat mussed up from a brief road series with the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds. They lost three out of four.

The Cards took two and Cincinnati one, but in the final game with the Reds yesterday the Mackmen found themselves and scored a 6 to 0 victory.

Paso Robles, Cal., March 11 (AP)—One more warning sign was been hung out at the Pittsburgh Pirates' training camp alongside those of "No liquor" and "All to bed by 11 p. m." The new words are "Card playing taboo." This step was taken by Donie Bush after hotel officials had complained of the carelessness of the men in throwing cigarette butts about the floor.

New Orleans, March 11 (AP)—Earl Averill, costly rookie purchased by the Cleveland Indians from the San Francisco club of the Coast League, will play center field, Manager Roger Peckinpaugh said today. He will be flanked by Jamieson in left and Porter in right.

Dallas, Tex., March 11 (AP)—Everything looks bright to Manager "Lena" Blackburne of the Chicago White Sox. Holdout worries have faded with the signing of Alex Metzler, star outfielder; his rookie pitchers are hurling excellent ball and his team has won three straight exhibition games from the Dallas Steers.

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., March 11 (AP)—After breaking even with Los Angeles in their first two exhibition games of the season, the Cubs were back on Catalina island for more conditioning today.

Manager Joe McCarthy is satisfied his club finally has got enough batting punch for a National League pennant, so his worries have revolved to pitching and the infield.

Tampa, Fla., March 11 (AP)—Goose Goslin, American League batting champion, has reached the Washington training camp here with an armful of good news for Manager Walter Johnson.

His throwing arm, he says, is all right. It was all wrong most of last season, and he had to relay the ball that reached him via the infield. Joe Judge, first baseman, who has been with him at Hot Springs and accompanied him to Tampa, echoed the outfielder's optimism.

TIGERS TACKLE SPRINGFIELD ON THURSDAY

Boston's battling Tigers will resume practice today in preparation for the game with Springfield Indians in the Arena Thursday night.

Tigers practically assured themselves of first place by beating Providence Reds twice last week, but mathematical certainty has not been attained thus far and the game forces will be out to clinch matters.

Springfield, being embroiled with New Haven in a desperate battle for the third playoff position in the raging Can.-Am. League, is expected to be tough for the Bengals.

The last game was a rough-house which resulted in an injury to Eddie Burke which kept him out three weeks.

Tigers are in wonderful condition to continue their battle to sew up first place, with every man full of drive and enthusiasm for the work in hand.

The team has demonstrated its superiority over the league in convincing fashion.

Not only has it a four-point lead in the standing over its closest competitor but it has scored more goals and has had less scored against it than any team in the league.

Deacon Waite, Reg Mackey and Reb Taylor stand high among the scorers of the circuit. Waite has scored 11 goals and made eight assists.

POLO

By BILL McAULEY

Harvard's undefeated pony polo team brought its local indoor campaign to a most successful conclusion Saturday night at the Commonwealth Armory.

The Crimson riders broke the record for goals scored in a single game, and won the Charles W. Plummer cup for the second year in succession.

In breaking the indoor record the Crimson malletmen scored better than a goal a minute, 33 being their total for the 30 minutes of actual play.

Eldridge Garry, playing number two, came into his own against the Cavalrymen by registering 17 of his team's goals. Tim Clark counted 8 his brother George 7, and Tommy Glynn, who replaced George in the final chukker, 1.

MANGINI SCORES

Roland Mangini, playing back for the Cavalrymen, notched the first goal of the match and as they had eleven conceded them, the Crimson had an even dozen to get before being on even terms.

It didn't take them long to accomplish this feat for at the end of the second five minute chukker they were in the lead and it was only a matter of how many they could register.

The victory also gave Harvard a cleanup, for the junior varsity won the Frederick Estes trophy emblematic of the junior division championship, although there is one more contest to be played.

CRIMSON STEPPING

The Crimson team, under the capable coaching of Sharp, is at the top of its game for the intercollegiate and Class A of the National championships, which will be played in New York week after next.

Until that time, however, there will be no let up in practice. The Crimson mentor intends to have the junior varsity and freshmen teams provide the varsity with opposition in a series of workouts.

It was reported that Tim Clark would withdraw from the team to devote his time to the crew sessions, but Coach Sharp says that there is no truth in the story, and that the brilliant all round athlete will lead the malletmen in their quest of the indoor championships.

Red Sox Rumbles

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 11—Several of the boys spent their day off fishing. At least they chartered a steamer with the intention of catching fish.

Instead they fed the fishes and the gulf became so rough that they were forced to return empty handed.

Bill Carrigan, Hy Mason and Bernie Wagner said "never again" upon returning.

Hughie Fullerton, demon baseball statistician, who is making the rounds of the Florida training camps, dropped in to see the Sox in action and was quite disappointed to find them idle. He left, promising to come back to watch them play the Cards on Wednesday.

He thinks that the Braves have a prize in young James, rookie infielder. The kid can do anything, he says, and he and Maranville look like the best players in the squad.

Ira Flagstead has arrived. He had a very tough winter, having suffered an attack of intestinal flu which kept him in bed for over a month and took 25 pounds off his never-very-large frame. He has regained 20 of the lost pounds, however, and is now in pretty good shape. He will take things easy for a while.

This town is closed up tight on Sunday and the boys who didn't mean it didn't know what to do with themselves. They would have gone out to the park, if they could have gotten into the club house, so anxious were they to play ball.

Trainer Bill Bierhalter hasn't any dopester and he doesn't know much about the new-fangled training schemes but he manages to keep the Sox athletes in pretty good trim. Not a player has complained of a pain or an ache since coming here.

President Bob Quinn is expected tomorrow morning to see how his hired men are coming along. He will see a much stronger outfit than he has had any time since buying the franchise.

Tigers Drop Game to N. H. Eagle Six

New Haven, March 11—Boston Tigers had an off night in scoring here with the result that the New Haven Eagles scored a 3-to-0 victory.

Fine work by Martin Barry brought New Haven both of its goals, the first coming in the opening period and the second being scored early in the third session.

A capacity house, taking advantage of the shifting of the day of the game to Sunday turned out to witness the all-important contest in New Haven's effort to gain the playoffs and was thrilled by the easy victory over the strong Tiger sextet.

Except for a few penalties in the first and second periods and a short lived fight between those old rivals, Bowcher of New Haven and Ostman of Boston, the game was tame.

Miami Five Victor at Basketball Tourney

Kansas City, Mo., March 11 (INS)—The strong Paul's Tires basketball team of Miami, Fla., eliminated the Monark Cement quintet of Humboldt, Kan., by a score of 44 to 23 in the opening games of the National A. A. U. basketball tournament starting here today.

St. Pete Squibs

Avon Park, Fla., March 11—A lot of the boys put in Sunday afternoon in planning. Johnny Cooney, Bruce Cunningham and Al Moore are huge and took three or four tips, regardless of cost.

Johnny Cooney's split finger ball threats, and he is ready to go to work once more. Just what he can do is one of those spring mysteries.

Charles Innes and Mrs. Innes are the newest victors in the camps. They intend to see a few games before heading back North.

A flock of Sunday fishing parties had to be called. A snappy Northeast breeze chewed up the Gulf of Mexico and the hardy mariners of these parts refused to leave shore.

Most of the impatient athletes went out golfing, but brought back no reports on waves. The gale was bad for good golfers and the majority of the bat swingers are not so good.

Doc Painter is willing to tell the world that his squad is in perfect fettle and will keep that way through the summer.

The report that Farrell was to be traded to Brooklyn has been denied by Judge Fuchs. Bobby made a winner offer, but it was one of those dime for a dollar propositions.

Leopardus Out of the Lincolnshire

London, March 11 (AP)—M. M. Bousman's four-year-old Leopardus, French entry in the Lincolnshire Handicap was withdraws today in that important opening race. The handicap will be run at Lincoln March 20, and is the first feature event of the new flat racing season which opens two days earlier.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Regular N. H. L. Hockey Season Ends on Saturday

BOSTON HAS REAL SHOT AT TITLE

Can.-Am. League Has Fortnight to Go; Tigers Also Have Chance for Championship

By BILL GRIMES

With only 11 more games scheduled for the National Hockey League, and an even dozen for the Canadian-American League, the curtain is falling on the 1928-1929 season of professional hockey.

Although the Can.-Am. League has only one more game on its list than has the N. H. L., the minor organization will not wind up for another fortnight, while, with the exception of the six clubs which are in the playoffs, the big league teams will call it a season next Saturday night.

Bill Grimes

It has been a wonderful season for hub hockey zealots. Not only are the Bruins and the Tigers well established in playoff positions, but they have excellent opportunities to finish in first place.

From the start of the season it was evident that the Bruins were destined for high honors. The Bruins are an all-star, hand-picked, regardless-of-cost proposition.

Due to the fact that they were burdened down with too many orders, they did not function at the start of the season but once they were allowed to go out and play their own game, they set up a season record of thirteen games with one defeat.

C. F. Adams, the owner of the Bruins, has expended hundreds of thousands of dollars to secure a winning combination. Expense meant nothing to Adams. All money that was necessary was there for the asking. Adams dug in, and in most cases dug deep.

With the Bruins all established in a playoff position, President Adams paid the Toronto club approximately $40,000 for Dr. Bill Carson.

ADAMS SPENT PLENTY

Regardless of the price asked Adams' purse has always been open, but it must be admitted that, compared with the amount of money Adams has paid for players, he has not obtained a return equal to his expenditures, or the Bruins would now be well out in front instead of battling to hold first place.

The case of the Tigers is the exact opposite to that of the Bruins. At the start of the season the fans could not figure how the Bengals were ever going to make a respectable showing.

True, the Tigers added Frank Waite, Johnny Lowe, Jr., and Clark Heyd to their roster, but with the exception of the first named little was known of the ability of the newcomers. Fortunately for the Tigers, the three new members have delivered.

Waite has been the key to the Tigers' success. Johnny Lowe, Jr., Tigers he was a wing man with Springfield, and the shift by Manager Eddie Powers which sent Waite to center, made the Tigers. Loucks, after a slow start, came through, while Heyd has been a very important cog in the Tiger machine.

TIGERS INDEPENDENT

The Tigers are the only club in the Canadian-American League which is not affiliated in some way with a National Hockey League team. They have been forced to carry on on their own, going through the season with only a single change.

The management has spent little or no money for players, in fact the sale of Dit Clapper to the Bruins and George Redding to the Canadian professional netted the Tigers more than the cost of the entire club.

Compared with the other Can.-Am. clubs the Tigers have no outstanding star, with the exception of Frank Waite, but they have been right up in the midst of the battle from the start of the season.

POWERS MADE TEAM

Under the direction and guidance of Eddie Powers, the Tigers have played smart hockey all year. Manager Powers' ability is too well known to dwell upon, but he has either shifted and juggled until there is a feeling that he will be rewarded with an N. H. L. berth next year.

The Bruins close their season next Saturday night with Pittsburgh, but they must meet the Chicago Blackhawks and Detroit before the end, while the Tigers carry on through next week, in spite of the fact that they have only four more games on their schedule.

THREE BIG COGS IN WORKS OF YANKEE TEAM

BABE RUTH — MILLER HUGGINS — LOU GEHRIG

This International Newsreel photo, taken in the Yanks' training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., includes the important trio of the great New York Americans ball club. Huggins is one of the best managers baseball has ever had. Gehrig is a tremendous hitter. And Babe knocks in the winning runs whenever his team is in need of them. The Bambino seldom fails to sock the ball when the hit means a lot. That is the best thing about the hard hitting of Ruth.

B. C. BASEBALL MEN FIGHT FOR BERTHS

The shadow of Coach Hugh Duffy's axe, dummy baseball games and the resumption of the battling for positions on the first team will keep the Boston College diamond squad bustling at the Commonwealth Armory this week.

Duffy made one slice last week, lopping off 13 aspirants, and thus reducing his roster to 30 members. The 30 are all so high class that it's hard to see where Duff can chop away without doing some damage. But the squad will be narrowed down probably to two dozen.

Dummy baseball games are an old B. C. custom at the armory, established by Jack Slattery when he coached the Eagles three springs ago. The teams line up according to the rules and play regulation innings.

These games have proven of great benefit in the past. Last spring the Eagles had but a week of cold March winds in which o get in trim for the opener with a very strong Georgetown nine. But the B. C. team looked like a midseason outfit chiefly because it had the chance to get the feel of the game in the indoor fusiles.

The hurlers have to toss them up with moderate speed, and the batters are also instructed to keep their bludgeons circling slowly before the pitcher delivers. But the pitchers have an opportunity of finding the plate and the batters get their eyes trained for the shoots.

Ouimet Out of Golf for Coming Season

Francis Ouimet is out of golf for most of the coming summer. The former champion underwent a major abdominal operation at the Cardinal O'Connell House. His condition is reported as uncomfortable.

Dr. William Buckley of Brighton, his physician, said that even with normal recuperation Ouimet will not be permitted to play any golf before mid-August and moreover that that prediction is optimistic.

Ouimet's plans for going to California for the amateur championship probably are off.

While going to business recently, Ouimet slipped and fell, so severely that an old injury which made it imperative that he submit to an immediate operation.

For the present none but members of Ouimet's immediate family will be permitted to visit him.

Cambridge Wins

Cambridge Y defeated Newton Y, 76 to 16, and Lynn Y defeated Quincy Y, 22 to 19, in the semi-finals of the Y. M. C. A. championship at Everett Y. The winners meet next Saturday for the championship.

Pirates Win

The Lexington Pirates swamped the Dorchester Question Mark five, 76 to 35, at basketball in the Lexington gymnasium. Rauding was the big scorer with 24 points.

HEADLOCK MAY HALT RUSH OF DYNAMITE

Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, will return to a local ring on Friday night when he will battle Mike Malcewicz, leading contender for his title, at the Garden.

Gus the Goat is working at Kelley & Hayes' gymnasium before capacity crowds, and he will be at the new gymnasium, 53 Hanover st., again this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Meanwhile, Malcewicz will work at Toland's gymnasium every afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Sonnenberg piled up one more win last Thursday night, when he drew the biggest house in the history of Schenectady, N. Y., with Capt. Jack Smith of Texas.

The advance sale for Friday night's bout has reached $15,000 in cash money. Tickets, too, have been on sale at the Garden and it is understood that more than $3000 in ducats has been tucked away in the strong box there, making a total advance sale of $18,000 with the match still five days away.

DUNDEE UNABLE TO MEET MELLO

Tack Hardwick of the Boston Garden announced today that Joe Dundee's condition will make it impossible for him to go through with his bout with Al Mello for some time to come.

It is unlikely that these welterweights will settle the question of superiority between them before the outdoor season, when it is hoped that their meeting will be for the title.

Hardwick takes full responsibility for Dundee's removal to the Chelsea gate Hospital and for his subsequent operation. He also said that if the bout had not been postponed there was a strong chance that Dundee would have lost an arm.

Hardwick also says that his only interest in the matter was to safeguard the boxer's health and that he was not concerned with any financial loss that the Garden may have suffered as a result of the postponement.

Callahan Fights Petrolle Tonight

Andy Callahan, Lawrence lightweight, will meet Pete Petrolle in a 10 round battle at Lawrence tonight. It will be Callahan's first start since his return from Florida, where he won his bout on the Sharkey-Stribling card.

SPEED DEMONS READY FOR TRIAL

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 11 (AP)—Two powerful racing automobiles stood ready today to make a dual assault upon the world's speed record of 207.55 miles an hour. They awaited only the prospect of perfect wind and beach conditions at low tide.

Major H. O. D. Segrave of England, who set a record of 203 miles an hour here two yeasr ago, has pitted his trim 12-cyinder Golden Arrow racer against the giant trimotored Triplex owned by J. M White of Philadelphia, which holds the present record. Each driver declared he was confident of setting a new mark of at least 215 or 220 miles an hour.

Unfavorable beach conditions, which has delayed the start of the speed trials for nearly a week, showed considerable improvement at low tide early today, and if the nine-mile sandy stretch is leveled at ebb tide today prospects of staging the tests are bright.

Segrave said today the presen.t attempt at the speed record is the last he will make. He estimates he has about one chance in 10 in coming through his tests alive.

At a theoretical speed of 240 miles an hour, he says, the hazards he will face are numerous. Included in the major dangers he lists at such speed are tire troubles, motor trouble, side winds and inequalities of the beach speedway.

"After I have checked everything, and taken every possible precaution, I am an absolute fatalist," he said. "I go out and try for the record and if I make it everything is all right. If I crash, I crash," he continued.

"I would have retired after I set a record of 203 miles an hour here two years ago in my Sunbeam special" Seagrave said, "but when English engineers built the Golden Arrow I was so impressed with its design and its possibilities that I consented to bring it to this country in an effort to take back the record with me to England."

NURMI MAY RUN IN CASEY GAMES SATURDAY

New York, March 11.—(AP)—Apparently better than ever because of his enforced layoff during a two weeks' suspension by the A. A. U., Paavo Nurmi is back in the running again in time to add the glamor of his presence to the closing features of the indoor track season.

Finally convincing A. A. U. officials that it was illness that kept him from appearing in the national championships, the famous Finn was reinstated Saturday as suddenly as he had been suspended.

He ran a few hours later in a novel team race at the seventh regiment games, winning the event with Ove Anderson, a fellow Finn.

Running alternate laps he covered his aggregate mile in close to four minutes flat.

Nurmi looked so good, in fact, that his appearance in the K. of C. games at the Garden Sq. Garden next Saturday night, one of the big events of the winter campaign, was freely predicted.

It is doubtful, however, whether Nurmi will enter the "mile of a century" in which Edvin Wide and Ring Purje, his Scandinavian rivals met in a mile earlier in the season, are entered.

If Nurmi does not choose to join the all-star field he may appear in a special event, Willis Ritola, his arch antagonist, having been mentioned as a possible opponent in a distance test of about 5000 metres.

Big Demand For H.-Y. Hockey Ducats

New Haven, Ct., March 11—Yale and Harvard fans are in a demand, proportionately, for tickets to the playoff of the tie game in the annual hockey series here Wednesday night as is usual for Yale-Harvard football games. Harold Woodcock, graduate manager of the Yale Athletic Association said tonight the announcing plans to meet the situation that Yale tickets will go on sale tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and will be restricted to members of the university and alumni.

Members of the university and alumni will be limited to four tickets each. Plans for the sale of Harvard tickets are being handled at Harvard.

Norwich on Top

Northfield, Vt., March 11—In their final game of the season the Norwich basketball players beat the U. S. coast guard academy, 31 to 19, here.

THERE was a spirit of good cheer in the air when Mr. Boston wandered into Harry Kelley's new gym at 53 Hanover st. Kelley greeted the veteran at the door and ushered him into a private dressing room, where Jimmy Brown parked Mr. Boston's coat.

"I call this place 'The Two Ring Gym,'" said Kelley. "I have a large ring and a medium sized ring This gives the boys an opportunity to get in plenty of boxing. They don't have to stand around by the hour and wait for the headliners to give them a chance to show."

Mr. Boston took a peek at each ring and also at the large floor space where heavy and light punching bags dangled from the ceiling. There were windows on three sides of the room.

"Plenty of light and air," remarked the veteran

Kelley showed the way to the dressing rooms. They were clean, well equipped and roomy.

"This is one of the finest spots of its kind anywhere," declared Mr. Boston.

THE door leading to the dressing room opened and Gus Sonnenberg popped in to do some training in preparation for his finish mad battle with Joe Malcewicz at the Boston Garden on Friday night. Paul Bowser, the promoter, was also in the party.

Jimmy Brown took charge of Gus and soon had him in action in the ring. For 15 minutes Dynamite and Koloff went through a strenuous workout.

Bowser's eyes fairly popped out of his head as he watched the former Dartmouth football hero do his stuff.

"I have never seen a wrestler come along as rapidly as Sonnenberg has," said the promoter, "When he started out, he had his fighting tackle, courage, aggressiveness and strength. He now has considerable skill and in addition some fine holds.

"Sonnenberg is blessed with powerful, long arms and is particularly successful in applying arm locks and wrist locks. Gus will require all of his strength and newly acquired skill when he collides with Malcewicz who is the last word in skilful grappling."

"I NOTICE quite a number of boxing folks watching Gus work," remarked Mr. Boston. "Charley Mealey, Jim MacDonald, Laddie Lee, Johnny Vacca, Lou Bozash, Tony Vatlin, Jack Steadman and some more of the followers of the ring are now equally interested in the mat game."

"The average boxer cannot understand how a wrestler can stand up under as much punnishment as they do in a tough match. Dan Koloff explained this matter briefly

"We are men of steel," said Dan.

"I think Dan is right. During his workout with Sonny, Koloff landed on his head hard enough to knock a dozen boxers out for a week each And he came up from the canvas with more fight in him than before'

SHELDON FAIRBANKS, General Manager of the Garden, called Mr Boston on the telephone

"It is my opinion that Joe Dundee wasn't in condition to go on with his bout with Al Mello," said Fairbanks. "I believe the Garden would have done the public an injustice if it had let the match go on.

"The advance sale was between $27,000 and $30,000 and I figure the show would have proved a success. As it was the Garden lost several thousands of dollars by calling the show off."

MR. BOSTON told the Manager of the Garden that what he said about $7 shows still goes

"I do not believe the fans should be asked to pay $7 for an attraction which was previously offered at $4.40," said the veteran. "From what I can find out, there was not any wild rush on the part of the public to buy the high priced seats. The fans rebelled against the $7 sock and they had right on their side.

"I WISH Dundee a speedy recovery from his infection and feel he will be able to resume boxing soon. If he agrees to meet Mello again, I hope the bout will be for the title and not an overweight match. Meanwhile I'm with the fellow in the street in his fight against a $7 top price for a boxing match that was first offered at $4.40."

Maribel Vinson Hurt in Arena Practice

Maribel Vinson, 17-year-old amateur skating champion, sprained her right ankle while practicing at the Boston Arena for the meet this week at Philadelphia.

Doing a twirl and jump, she came down in such a way as to twist her ankle.

Dr. Francis Barnum of Brookline, and of the Boston Skating Club, who was present, attended her and gave first aid.

Rawlins Victor in Canadian Squash

Montreal, March 11—Herbert Rawlins of New York, one of the greatest stylists of the squash racquet court and former United States amateur champion, today has the title of Canadian amateur squash racquets champion. He defeated Ralph Powers, the Boston entry, 16—15, 15—6, 15—4, in the final after an exhibition of the game such as is not often seen here.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

A FEW drops of boric acid solution used in the eyes now and again will cleanse them and feel refreshing. The daily use of eye washes is not necessary nor is it desirable. The tear glands wash the eyes quite well and it is nature's way.

Food For Health

"AND be sure to include some bran in your diet every day"—how often the family physician has told us this. And we follow his directions faithfully for a week—perhaps a fortnight—and then somehow we go back to our old food habit—and pretty soon another trip to the doctor.

In the old days when bran meant something painfully dry and tasteless and about as easy to swallow as sawdust, there were excuses for slipping from the past path of diet virtue, but modern all bran—there is no resemblance to its ancestor. A special process of manufacture has added flavor and cooked the bran until it is palatable and digestible.

Cooking, shredding and toasting has transformed it into a delicious crisp cereal. Yet all the roughage and mineral natural to bran—the phosphorous and iron—has been retained.

All-bran may be used as a cereal with milk or cream (or with fruit juice if you are reducing), in soups, combined with raw or cooked fruit ready to eat for a cooked cereal, or stewed tomatoes. And endless are the varieties of muffins, brown bread, griddle cakes, cookies, fudge squares and waffles which are improved from both a health and flavor standpoint, through the addition of all-bran.

Here's my favorite recipe for Bran Bread

BRAN BREAD

1 yeast cake.
2 tsps. salt.
1-3 c. of brown sugar or molasses.
2 c. lukewarm water.
2 tbsps. shortening
3 c. all-bran
5 c. bread flour.

Crumble yeast into a bowl, add the sugar, salt and water. Mix until smooth. Add 2 c. of flour and the shortening which has been softened. Beat well, add all-bran and the remaining 2 c. of flour. Let rise until double in bulk—punch—let rise again, shape into loaf. Let rise until light; bake in a moderate oven 400 to 350 F. Less yeast (as little as ¼ cake) may be used if a longer time is given the bread to rise.

Shall I send you recipes for bran muffins, bran griddle cakes, normits, waffles, doughnuts, fudge squares cookies and puddings?

Twin Bill Program

THERE will be an all-star performance at the Martha Lee Cooking Matinee this Wednesday afternoon, at 2 p. m., when Georges Loulouzakis and Demetrio Pacini, head chefs of the Hotel Touraine will take charge of the cooking lesson.

"The Touraine" in Boston is a synonym for cuisine of superlative excellence, and it will be a real privilege to see unfolded the precious secrets of these culinary artists.

M. Loulouzakis was born on the Isle of Crete, Greece, in May, 1894. He served his apprenticeship at the Grand Hotel Huck in Smyrna, and later went to the Grand Hotel de Londres, and the Maison de Comestibles, also in Smyrna. From there he transferred to the French yacht Rijulin, U. Y. F., on which he travelled around the world. He came to America at the time of the Spanish-American War, volunteered, and served on the U. S. gunboat Bancroft as wardroom chef. After the war he came to the Hotel Touraine where he has been ever since.

Demetrio Pacini is a native of Lucca, Italy, and came to this country 22 years ago. His first position was in Boston at the Hotel Touraine, where he was nicknamed "Bimbo" on account of his youth. He is still with the Touraine and the nickname sticks. M. Pacini is especially proud of his lovely wife and four children, one of whom is attending the Conservatory of Music.

The Hotel Touraine specialties which these culinary kings will prepare will include Pilafe au Graoud a la Stambou, Musaca a la Oriental, Supreme of Chicken Sultana and Lamb Chop Maison D'Or.

You will need no second invitation, I am sure, to be on hand next Wednesday promptly at 2 p. m.

LAYER CAKE

1-3 c. butter, ¾ c. sugar, 2 eggs, 1½ c. flour, 3 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, ½ c milk, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Cream butter and sugar together. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Add vanilla and beat thoroughly. Bake in 2 greased layer cake pans in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Cool. Put layers together with any cream filling (chocolate, pineapple, lemon, orange or cocoanut), ice top with Confectioners' Frosting.

CONFECTIONERS' FROSTING

1½ tbsp. butter, 1½ c. confectioners' sugar, 3 tbsp. milk or cream, 1-8 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. vanilla.

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together thoroughly. Add enough milk or cream to make the frosting the proper consistency to spread. Add salt and vanilla and mix well.

Today's Short Story LOVE ME—LOVE MY TWIN!

EVER since they were tiny Peter had warned them

When Betty Day wore a blue hair ribbon and Blythe wore a pink one so that people would know them apart

Peter, from the superior wisdom of his additional six years, said gravely "Some day a young man is going to fall in love with one of you and not the other. Don't let us break your hearts, either of you twins if a got to happen."

Then Peter grew up and turned into a serious-minded engineer, and only came back to Englehart occasionally to see his family and say hello" to the twins who still lived next door

"It hasn't happened yet, Peter," they always told him triumphantly. They didn't want it to. The idea of anything that might mean separation frightened them. They made solemn vows never to part when they were schoolgirls, and afterwards when they were trying to decide what to do with themselves.

They would only do things where two were necessary—and there weren't many jobs like that. That was how they came to join the "Sister Gloria" cast when they were just past eighteen. That, and the fact that they'd always loved dancing—and had grown up to be very attractive.

They had a little dance in the second act, and then rushed out to catch the Jersey tubes for home.

They created quite a stir, the "Dav Sisters"; people prophesied a brilliant future for them. Their beauty was so fresh and young, their dancing so spontaneous. But Betty and Blythe paid little attention to anyone

"You two could set Broadway on its ear if you'd use your heads and keep your eyes open," Helen Dove of the chorus told them.

The twins smiled and hurried home. They were half afraid of the merry gaudy world about them the lights and music and applause. The stage job kept them together and that was enough for Betty and Blythe.

Then—it happened

The producer's brother, Kenneth McLane, watched the show faithfully 39 times before he was able to impress the twins. He lay in wait for them at the stage door—he sent flowers—admiring discreet little notes. He invited them for supper, had his car waiting to take them to the tubes. They ignored him.

"Stage door Johnnies," said their mother every other night, "means no good to anyone."

But such persistence had to win. Betty and Blythe couldn't stand Helen Doves teasing remarks anymore

Kenneth did turn out to be a very nice person. The twins succumbed to his persistence one rainy night when there weren't any taxis to be had and allowed him to drive them to their home. He treated them exactly the same, not one smile or nod for one that didn't include the other, not a speck of partiality. It was fun for the two girls who hadn't really known any men before—except Peter. After that they saw Kenneth frequently.

One night Betty was ill. Blythe did the act with an understudy. It didn't go well. She was tired and worried and annoyed, when Kenneth helped her into his car. Tears were in her eyes

She wanted to hurry straight home to Betty. And then Kenneth poured out his heart. "You know it isn't right, dear, you're being so closely tied to Betty. Can't you see, I love you—I have since the first minute you danced onto the stage in that silly little pink thing. You and Betty can always belong to each other, but dearest—"

The terrible thing, Blythe thought, was that she listened to him—and knew that he was probably right—and knew also that she had been avoiding very fond of him, without quite realizing it.

"Oh, I can't even think of it," she said. "Betty would be brokenhearted. Besides we've sworn an oath never to separate."

"And be old maids all your life, and dance in choruses, darling, and take tubes out to New Jersey. You can't do it. You'll be only half a person, each of you. Betty needs to fall in love, too, and you're keeping her from it. Don't you understand? You're both being selfish."

"She would die—of unhappiness. It's much cheaper." She wept a little in his arms, and let him kiss her very gently, but she was miserable. Miserable for him, and for Betty and for—herself.

"Promise me you'll never tell her?" she asked Kenneth "Never never, never"

And he promised, feeling unhappier than he had ever felt in his life.

Peter was home for the week end Blythe waylaid him in his garage next morning and told him the whole story

It was so easy to tell big, handsome, sun-burned Peter about it. She and Betty had always told him their troubles. He wouldn't think she was wrong, he might be able to help

He looked at her with a quick smile as she talked, and said, "Don't you worry I'll fix it—don't question anything I do or say. Promise to trust me. I'd take Betty out for a little ride in my car tonight after you go to the show. She isn't well enough to dance tonight, anyway"

It was a beautiful, whispering spring night in the little Jersey town. Betty let Peter help her into the car like a trusting child. She had something to tell him, too. She broke out with it suddenly.

"Blythe thinks I don't know," she said half sobbing. "It's about a man named Kenneth. He loves Blythe, and they're afraid to tell me."

That was what made her ill, she told Peter. She wanted to be big enough to tell them to love each other, and she hadn't dared "It makes me so scared and lonely," she said.

"But I knew that the little girl would never love me—until Blythe loved, too. So I waited—and waited—and now"

"Peter, is it really true—why, I never once thought. I thought you loved us both, equally always"

"I loved you both, but not equally. I was afraid that you might fall in love with someone else while I was waiting. But you knew all along, didn't you, Betty?" he asked, waiting for Blythe, just like Kenneth

"I—I thought you were probably both"

He held her close to him, and she whispered in his ear, "Twins are an awful bother, aren't they"

And he whispered back to her "They're twice as good as anything else in the world—if one of the twins is you

Elinor Glyn Says:

By ELINOR GLYN

WHAT is the truth of so many women past forty behaving in kittenish ways now, and dating nasaly after youthful joys"

It is simply because labels have been removed, and they are no longer branded as "old," "passe," or "matrons," and so emerge the natural desires which the poor things of a past generation had to suppress, and sometimes express themselves in undignified manifestations.

The thing for all women over forty to remember is that they have a perfect right to all the joys of dancing and participating in young people's pleasures, so long as they do not make themselves ridiculous by silly ingenue manners and unrestrained flirtation

Many women over forty are more attractive than when they were twenty, and their charm of experience and maturity should be mysterious and alluring, not blatant and frivolous

I write this because yesterday I saw the mother of a serious girl of twenty—herself but forty-two and still pretty—acting the provocative flapper to a group of college youths. And it was a sorry sight!

No girls, when you begin to notice your young mothers behaving foolishly, just arouse their sense of humor—if they have any—and if not, you had better speak plainly and tell them they are losing their self-respect and your respect for them, and very soon will lose their admirers as well

Correct Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a constant reader of your column and enjoy it very much for its cultural education. Last week you emphasized the fact that one should never use "Pleased to meet you." Will you kindly explain when one is introduced to either a man or a woman?

2 I would also like to know a better way, a more original way than the old traditional "Yours truly" for ending a business letter, or casual friendship letter

ROBERT.

VERY gladly will I, for it is most important that, in these daily occurrences of introductions, we know exactly what to say. And exactly what to say is, always, "How do you do." We may, if we wish, add the name, "How do you do, Miss Hall" and this makes the phrase even more mannerly

2 There is no other form for ending a business letter but the three of the "truly" variety: "Very truly yours," "Yours very truly," and "Yours truly." In this case, as in the case of your first question, tradition is what rules, and it is better to be traditional than incorrect.

However, in the last part of your question, you say, "the casual friendship letter." "Yours truly" is never in good form for the ending of social letters. For the semi-formal social letter, "Very sincerely yours" is the best ending. For a man an especially good form for the ending of the semi-formal social letters is "faithfully yours." And indeed for a woman, too, for that matter.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My sister's name is Adrienne. Some people pronounce it, using a long A and some use a short A. Which is correct?

WONDERING.

THE pronunciation of one's name is as one chooses to have it, and your sister should decide which pronunciation she prefers. Then as she pronounces it her friends will soon follow suit. Usually, as this name is pronounced, the A is given the long value, but the short A is charming, too.

DANGER LIES IN BULKLESS DIETS
Eat ALL-BRAN and Prevent Constipation

Thousands of people wonder why they are suffering when they try to be so careful regarding their diet. They have headaches, bad complexions and are unhappy because their old-time strength and vigor are gone.

Constipation is often the cause of this bad health. And lack of bulk in the diet is usually the cause of constipation. Roughage is needed daily to sweep the system clean of poisonous wastes. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will supply this roughage.

ALL-BRAN works as nature works. It is guaranteed to bring relief and to prevent constipation. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal.

Ready-to-eat with milk or cream. Delicious in flavor. Add it to your muffins and other hot breeds. Try the recipes on the package. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN because it is 100% bran. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Served in hotels, restaurants and dining-cars. Sold by all grocers.

The RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

—Revived by Merle W. Hersey—

The Adventures of Great Detective Recounted

CHAPTER ONE

Old King Brady renews acquaintance on the Blue Star line pier with Jonathan Jenkins, who is suspected of smuggling diamonds concealed in a wooden idol. Sophia Jenkins take the idol and elopes with a Chinaman. The Bradys are called on to shadow the Chinaman and restore the idol

MR. JONATHAN JENKINS returned from Europe on the S. S. Gigantic late in October. After being held up on the pier by the customs officers and his effects thoroughly searched he was allowed to leave the pier.

Again and again the government had tried to trap Mr. Jenkins in the act of smuggling, but this wary gentleman was careful not to undervalue any of his importations. He went to Europe each year early in July and returned in October with a miscellaneous lot of old pictures, old books and rare antiques, which he was very particular to declare to the custom house. But he was suspected of bringing in diamonds and other goods—which were not declared.

Every possible means had been used to trap him—to no avail. Pretty girls tried to make friends with his sour-faced daughter, Sophia, and genial gentlemen had scraped acquaintance with him at hotels and watering places, detectives they were, but not one of them had ever detected anything about his private affairs.

People remembered that he had made his start by advancing five dollars on a painting, which he afterwards sold for $60,000.

Sophia had finished with the inspectors an hour and a half before her father was released. A hideous little wooden idol had been found in one of his trunks, and the customs men spent an hour and a half in trying to find diamonds inside of it.

"I don't know what its value is, gentlemen," said Mr. Jenkins, "it was a present from an old friend of mine, a collector in Hamburg. He claims it is very old. I am not up on Hindoo idols and you will have to value it as you please."

The idol passed, Miss Sophia took charge of it, wrapped it in brown paper, and carried it in her hand dangling from the end of a string as she paced up and down.

On the wharf were three persons who did not appear to be overburdened with business—a tall elderly man dressed in a long blue coat, an old-fashioned blue stock and stand-up collar, and a big white hat with an unusually broad brim; standing a few feet away was a good looking couple who were talking together.

At half past seven a cab drove down upon the wharf, stopped, the door slightly opened. Someone peered out. Presently Miss Sophia came along. Immediately a hand was thrust out of the cab—a man's hand, long, slim and yellow, with tapering fingers. On the third finger was a valuable diamond ring.

Miss Sophia passed the package to the hand, opened the door a little wider and sprang in. The door closed, the cabby started off. The old gentleman in the white hat passed the couple and pronounced a single word, "Now." The couple hurried off the pier ahead of the cab.

Fifteen minutes later Mr. Jonathan Jenkins came by, evidently looking for Miss Sophia. He saw the old gentleman in the big hat. He hurried toward him with outstretched hand. "Well, well!" he exclaimed, "if here ain't my old friend Brady. How are you, anyway? You don't look a day older than you did 20 years ago."

"I can return the compliment," said the world-famous old detective. "Been across lately on good seas?" Had your usual trouble with the inspectors?"

"Worse than usual. For some reason Uncle Sam seems to have a grudge against me. By the way, you remember my daughter?"

"Miss Sophia? Perfectly well," he replied. "Is she to have her car on the pier about fifteen minutes ago as she entered a cab and was driven away?"

"What!" cried Jenkins evidently taken aback.

"It is as I tell you. It drove down on the wharf; she evidently did not engage it, as she did not go outside, and the passport was Chinaman."

The old man turned as white as a sheet, "Great Heavens, no!" he exclaimed.

"I am sorry to have to tell you this," said Old King Brady. "It seemed all right, however, for Miss Sophia stepped of her own free will."

"The man was probably our Chinese butler. But now I shall have to look at it for myself."

They walked outside the big gate and looked up and down the wide street. "I am afraid they are gone," gasped Mr. Jenkins.

"No cabs, either," replied the old detective. "You can probably get one at the Twenty-third street ferry."

"Still keeping that house on Washington Square, Mr. Brady? If you like, I can give you a lift across town."

Old King Brady accepted, and soon they were seated in a cab riding along West Twenty-third Street.

Mr. Jenkins turned suddenly to the old detective. "Did you notice whether that Chinaman had a diamond ring on his left hand?"

"Yes, he did."

Mr. Jenkins groaned.

"I hope it is all right, Mr. Jenkins. We have known each other for a long time, and I can see you do not believe that man to be your butler."

"I am afraid not. I'll tell you the truth, Brady. Sophia is going to get married, but she scares all the men away with her fearful temper. We met a Chinese gentleman abroad, but I did not dream that Sophia was especially attracted to him. He crossed ahead of us. I am afraid Sophia has eloped with him."

"Oh, I understand. It certainly looks that way. But I am told they make kind, indulgent husbands. But here we are at Fifth Avenue. With your permission, I will stop the cab."

Mr. Jenkins hurriedly asked "Brady, should it prove necessary, would you undertake a case for me?"

"Sure, Mr. Jenkins," replied the old detective, "could I refuse an old friend?"

"You put it very neatly. Possibly I may call on you Good night."

The old detective stood alone on the curb. "You old rascal!" he muttered. "YOU give me a case! More likely you would hire some one to put a knife in my back if you only knew."

Old King Brady knew Mr. Jenkins for what he really was.

The old detective now returned home. There he found his partners, Young King Brady and Alice Montgomery, the young couple we have already alluded to.

Well, children, how did it turn out?" asked Old King Brady.

"Oh we shadowed them to No. — Peil st.," replied Young King Brady.

"Yes" said Old King Brady, "that is correct. Well Alice you'll have to get on the job immediately. Her supper This business is a little tricky to suit me, but Secret Service orders must be obeyed, or we make a break with the Government altogether."

Of course, the Bradys are not regular Secret Service men, but they have a roving commission with the Government under which they can be called on any time. And this was such a case.

Now, among other things, the Government keeps detectives in all large European cities, whose business it is to watch suspected smugglers and note what they buy. When Mr. Jenkins had, told Old King Brady about having had business with a Chinaman abroad was quite true. Old King Brady knew all about it, for Ah Sam, the Chinaman whom Miss Sophia had contrived to marry was nothing more nor less than a government man.

The meeting on the pier had been anticipated, and the Bradys were ordered to keep watch and learn where Ah Sam took his supposed bride. The Government did not entirely trust the Chinaman.

The scheme was simple enough. Ah Sam was to desert Miss Sophia as soon as he got her to Chinatown and leave her thoroughly frightened. Alice Montgomery, disguised as a Chinaman, was to rescue her, but only after she had agreed to expose her father's smuggling scheme. Alice speaks and read Chinese fluently, which would be of great help to her in this case. Her disguise was simply perfect.

Woman Sleuth Plays a Part in Many Thrilling Situations

'Reno'; The Mad Dance of Divorce

By CORNELIUS VANDERBILT Jr.

CHAPTER 15

SOME 15 miles south of Reno, silhouetted against the night sky, stood a darkened granite house, one of the few days when gold poured from the Virginia City mines and the hot springs close by were fashionable for bathing.

In a dark clump of shrubbery, Felicia slipped off her last garment and stood, for a moment, like a little statuette in the starlight.

"Where's that bathing-suit, Peg?" she demanded, giggling.

Peg, pulling on her own suit, laughed at her. "For a plugged nickel, Felicia, I'd take your clothes and run! Then what would you do? September morn on an August night!"

"Felicia!" Billy Blair's voice, impatient, dangerously near.

"Peg, where did you put it? Peg Hodge—" She was on the verge of tears.

"Billy, y'oughta see your girl friend!" Peg shouted. "The poor child can't find her bathing-suit, she—"

On the other side of the bushes her voice quavered. "I'll help look for it, I—"

"Billy, if you move a'other inch, I'm gonna shoot you!" Felicia.

"Peg, if you don't give me my suit I'll be undressed, and Billy's laughter rang out: "Go home! Yes you will—wearing a smile, I suppose!"

"Here y'are" Laughing, Peg handed Felicia the suit, a diminutive affair of black satin, and Felicia pulled it on as the boy appeared around the bushes.

"Oh, you found it!" he said

"You bet I found it!" Felicia made a face at him. "And if those springs are as warm as you all say they are, lead me to 'em. I'm shivering."

Figures darted about over the short grass, only vaguely outlined in the discreetly dim light of hobbing Japanese lanterns suspended from eves. Youthful laughter hung in the air

Men and women from the dining-room adjacent wandered here, sometimes, but it was an especial rendezvous for the younger set, the university crowd.

Billy slipped his arm about Felicia's slim waist and, barefooted, they danced across the lawn.

"Felicia!" He stopped abruptly, not releasing her, and his voice trembled a little. "I think you're awfully wonderful!" The sophisticated young man of the flask vanished before a blundering boy, confused by his own emotion.

"Why, Billy!" She moved lightly away from him. "Thank you. She danced on tiptoes down toward the pool, murmuring a snatch of song.

"This was the youth of whom she had been cheated, the gaiety which marriage with Brett had denied her.

"Oo-o-h!" With a little sigh of delight she slipped into the tepid water. "Oh, this is heavenly!" She splashed about lazily, still humming the refrain. "It's like bathing in warm milk!"

Finally she moved to the edge of the sand and lay on her side, cheek resting upon one wet, bare arm, with the warm water protecting her body from the cool air as though it had been a blanket. Billy Blair moved up beside her, his worshipful eyes on her face.

"You look like a mermaid, Felicia!"

"I feel like one" She moved her hand lazily in the water, sending little ripples toward him. "What are you—a merman or a shipwrecked sailor?"

Whatever you want me to be, he told her, and meant it.

Her laughter was low. Billy was frankly fascinated by her—and what fun to have a man watch you with his eyes on fire!

"You're the loveliest thing I ever saw!" he told her intensely.

She smiled. It was impossible to be serious. The night was enchanted—a great black arc above their heads, glittering with stars.

"And that inverted Bowl they call the sky . . . whereunder crawling, cooped, we live and die . . ." she quoted softly.

Beneath the water, his hand grasped hers. "Yesterday this cave's madness did prepare . . . tomorrow's silence, triumph, or despair . . . Drink! for you know not whence you came, nor why. Drink! for you know not why you go, nor where." He was silent as he finished the quotation. "We've been studying that this week Old Omar—you think he was right, Felicia?"

"I wonder?" She pondered lazily upon the philosophy of one Omar Khayyam.

The boy certainly enjoyed his idyll. Billy continued. "Drink! for you know not . . . How about a little drink, Felicia?"

She shrugged, and warm water rippled deliciously about her shoulders. "I suppose we'll be just plain bullied if we don't get out of this water soon!" Lazily she licked her white feet. "Oh, well!" She rose, like a modern Venus, from the waves—a twentieth-century Venus in a one-piece bathing suit that ran back and got dressed.

There was no sign of Peg, and in the shelter of the bushes Felicia tried herself leisurely. Dick would be back tomorrow—or next day! It seemed as though he had been gone a year. So many things had happened; she had changed so. What had made her change? She paused, drawing on a sheer silk stocking, and tried to think.

She loved Dick, didn't she? Of course she did! And yet . . .

"Ready, Felicia?" It was Billy.

"Almost." Shivering, she dropped her dress over her rumpled hair, wriggled into it. Her hairpins were scattered and she had no mirror. Oh, well what was the difference?

She emerged from the shadows, her light-brown hair tumbled about her shoulders.

"I think I have a sweater in the car," she said. "You know, it's cool."

Billy held out the flask. "Much warmer in any sweater ever made." She shook her head, and Billy passed by a window, they heard a girl's voice from within, murmuring, laughing softly. Clean small fun, pines, needles prickle beneath their feet . . . .

Presently a boy and a girl were locked in one another's arms. Felicia looked away, embarrassed by having intruded. Sadly disturbed by the absorption of the two.

"Honestly, Peg dear . . ." Joe's voice, pleading

Felicia stopped short. This would was no place to walk; there were too many lovers in the grass. Maintaining an even balance, her embarrassment and her excitement heightened.

"Let's go back to the beach," she said, a little breathlessly

He followed, however she led. Back on the white sand, they sat down and when he took her in his arms she did not resist. Recklessly she returned his kisses, she could not think; she did not want to think.

'The Road to Endor'; A Fine, Thrilling Six-Day Novel

Pentecost would leave his buggy standing in front of the parsonage, follow Streator into his study and sit there by the hour, sucking his pipe and wrangling with all the good will in the world.

But it was the work of more years than one that brought them to this stage of discordant concord, their friendship came about so gradually and naturally that, when at length it was fast welded, Gosport accepted as a matter of course what at first it would most virulently have resented, the association of its Presbyterian minister with an infidel confessed. But by then it too had learned to value Pentecost for what he was.

But there was another side to Streator—his temper—it came out when he hammered Pedro Berea into insensibility after the latter had beaten his wife.

"If Berea hadn't gone under when he did, if he had stood me off two minutes longer—Heaven help me! I'm afraid I would have killed him."

"A good job, too?" Pentecost darkly opined, but the minister protested. "Do you know how many nights I've passed on my knees, Hugh, praying God to deliver me from the dominion of this deadly anger . . ." He viewed his victim in anguish and unrest. "For pity's sake! don't wear those bandages on me—get about your business, save him if you can"

Streator came to know Mary Thatcher—he couldn't get her out of his thoughts. He had saved her life and he loved her. But Mrs. Aphorp, the middle-aged distant relative who seemed to guide the destinies made it clear to the minister that Mary was as good as engaged

Nevertheless he saw her and while she sketched she led him on to talk about himself, his life in the parsonage, his work in the church, the other work he did in the name of the church and its service but outside the enrolled ranks of its congregation; suspending her pretext of sketching while she listened with a warm shining in her eyes, to his tale of a quiet life that was, notwithstanding, rich in such works as God delights to the pastors of His flocks.

Their love was mutual but as yet unavowed. She told him one day that her Cousin Ella was planning to take her back to Brooklyn. Streator seized her hand and touched them with his lips. "You know," he said, "I love you."

Her fingers convulsively tightened. "I know!" she gladly cried—"that is why! . . . Yesterday I wouldn't go to the Episcopalian Church in Tiverton with her and Beverly—I told another fib, and I didn't feel well enough. And the minute they left, I made up to those people who were going to Gosport to hear you and got them to ask me to go along. So last night there was another row more awful than the first one, and today Cousin Ella announced the packing up—"

"But you?" Streator cried out—"you're not going to let her—sure-ly—?"

She made as if impulsively to answer, caught herself, turned her head away and gave a feeble, unconvincing tug at her imprisoned hands; then all at once flung back to him her face, all sobered now, with grave eyes that mutely questioned him through a moment that seemed endless while he waited, suffocating with emotion, till reading an honest answer in his gaze unswerving, she sighed, and trembled to him, and there, in the midst of that wide sweep of open upland in the stark of the sun, who whomever would might see, lifted her lips for their first kiss.

Within a month Gosport was wondering how it had ever managed without her—how, if it came to that, the minister had. The parsonage was a new place because of her, the pastor a more greatly blessed man; both, like her, gave out a quiet joy in living that diffused like sunlight.

When that first winter began to loose its grip of frost Mary was for a while engrossed in refurbishing and furnishing the parsonage

With the household machinery running smoothly under the joint care of Toby and the eye orinpe, his mouth twisted with pain. "I make you unhappy!" he groaned.

"Only when you leave me too long alone, when I see you avoiding me . . ."

Long at first and ever longer spells or musing, sober almost to sadness, began to space the constant if gentle flow of high spirits she had brought to the parsonage

Streator, too was changing. He was not less kind, but daily, somehow, a little more remote. He was working harder, even, than before his marriage, giving his strength and spirit without stint to his office, preaching of a Sunday with an intenser fervor, burning the student lamp on his study desk into the wee hours of every night . . . While upstairs, in the bedchamber they still shared, she lay lonely whom he loved, wakeful in his absence from her side, staring wide-eved into the unfriendly dark. He looked up one night from praying above an interrupted sermon to find that the study door had quietly been opened and to see her standing in it, a slender shape of white.

"Have I disturbed you, Andrew; the young wife faltered. He swung round and without words opened his arms; she went straightway to them, nestled to him on her knees. "O Andrew!" she cried, half in thankfulness, half in sob . . .

"Mary!" he fondly whispered to the hair he kissed—"Mary!"

Stifled sounds escaped the face his bosom muffled but he made out words: "I was so lonely, I couldn't go to sleep for thinking

"What were you thinking about?"

"You—and me." Mary sat up, gripping his shoulders with both hands, hungrily searching his face. "Wondering if you still loved me.

"Love you!" Streator's voice toiled a deep note "I love you," he slowly said—"too much."

Mary caught at her breath as if stabbed, and her face grew as white as her nightdress "How can that be?—too much!"

"I'm not sure," he said, repenting. "I know how to make you understand, without hurting you

"Nothing can hurt us much," she quickly protested. "as not to understand Do you suppose I can be happy, loving you the way I do, treated the way I am?"

She let her eyes cringe, his mouth twisted with pain. "I make you unhappy!" he groaned.

"Only when you leave me too long alone, when I see you avoiding me . . ."

"And I love you so!"

Her look remained inflexibly accusing. "Too much—you said."

"God gave us our love" Streator began, groping for words, "in witness to His loving kindness, to be the crown of our labors in His service, for us to honor and treasure in all gratitude to Him from whom it comes—not to exalt above our reverence to Him, nor for us to degrade into an excuse for self-indulgence. I must not let myself forget Him in you, dear—"

"Do you think He grudges me the little of yourself you guess in me?"

"I think," said Streator, "He is wise and kind but, above all, just. I think He knows how hard He makes the fight but counts on us to prove our worthiness. And because He loves us, God gave up from helpless and He like hell to will not suffer us to put our pitiful love before the love we owe Him—He will not hold me a worthy steward of His trust till I have learned not to let your face come between me and my work for Him."

What could a woman say to that? or do? A hand caught at Mary's bosom as if she felt a knife turning there, but she made no other sign expostulation against such inhumanity practiced in the name of a kind and loving God, but her lips were silent

They had been more than four years married when, one night, the minister brought home a friend, Tom Dalzell, explaining carefully that he was ill

It was in the dead of winter. Gosport had for weeks existed in its deadest phase of hibernation

Dalzell put into Andrew Streator—man of God—wouldn't tell a lie to save his soul from hellfire, and he like hell to save the face of a friend!" Dalzell caught himself up sharply and entreated Mary with a grimace of shame. "Beg your pardon, Mrs Streator! It isn't true. I'm ill

If I'd known about you I wouldn't have let Andy bring me I'm not ill, I'm drunk . . ." Divested of the coonskin coat, he lifted to Mary suppliant hands that shook uncontrollably. His features worked "Drunk as a dog!" he sobbed in the extreme hysteria of alcoholism; and collapsing into a chair pillored his head on folded arms folded on the table, and cried horribly

The drunkard was in a bad way it was a question whether the physician's skill could save him from delirium tremens; he would need close watching

Bathed and shaved, the whiskey flush faded out under the native brown of his skin, his slender and wiry body well-poised in proper clothing, Dalzell looked what he was when he was himself, a man of a good order of intelligence and of the world as well. Now only hands affected with a stubborn tremor and the hang-dog face with which he addressed himself to Mary Streator were reminiscent of the besotted thing he had been And he was so surely abject in his repentance that she had not the heart to let him; finish the apology he attempted.

"You are too good to me," Dalzell humbly protested. "And I shall never forget—I don't want to."

I've been urging Tom to visit with us a while" Streator put in "He's got some writing to do, and I tell him he couldn't find a quieter spot to do it in. But he won't listen to me, Mary; I'm afraid, unless you can win him over—"

"What Andy means," Dalzell put in to forstall the response that primed, "is that I'm down and out for the time being—broke and jobless and apt to be that way until I can get back to Boston or New York and persuade some newspaper that ought to know better to give me another chance. I've imposed on your charity and patience too much as it is—"

"If you think that," Mary pointed out, "I'm sure you can't want to make us unhappy by going away before you're entirely well again."

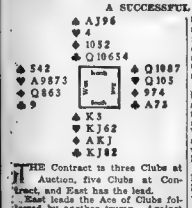
SOLUTION TO SATURDAY'S PUZZLE

AUCTION BRIDGE
by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD
The World's Greatest Authority

A SUCCESSFUL CROSS-RUFF.



THE Contract is three Clubs at Auction, five Clubs at Contract, and East has the lead.

East leads the Ace of Clubs followed by another trump. Against a two-suited hand a trump lead usually offers the best defense, when the partner of the two-suit bidder has denied one suit and accepted the other, since in such situation the establishment of the denied suit is usually necessary for the successful play of the hand and the establishment must as a rule be effected by means of the trumps in Dummy.

In this particular hand the establishment of the denied Spade suit was not necessary, but Dummy's two remaining trumps were required in cross-ruffing the hand. Had the adversaries been able to lead trumps a third time, game could not have been made.

Declarer, winning the second trick with the 8 of Clubs, puts himself in with the Ace of Spades to take the Heart finesse. Declarer assumes the Ace of Hearts to be in West's hand since East, who has already shown the Ace of Clubs would probably have bid had he held the Ace of Hearts also.

Declarer finesses the Jack of Heart, forcing West's Ace. West leads a Spade, which Dummy wins with the King.

Declarer then makes the King of Hearts and Ace of Diamonds and thereafter successfully cross-ruffs the hand, losing but the two tricks to the adversaries' Aces and therefore scoring game on the hand.

Another hand illustrative of Auction and Contract bidding, will be presented by tomorrow's article.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write to him care of the paper enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

LOVES OF STAGE BEAUTIES

By RUTH MORRIS

WHEN 19-year-old Dora Bland came from Ireland to act with a small theatrical company in Leeds, England, in 1782, she was asked by her manager in what type of stage business she excelled —tragedy, comedy or opera. Dora answered without hesitancy that she excelled in all.

It was a sweeping statement for an untried novice—but Dora proved its truth at her debut, and in a rather amusing way.

After the last curtain had descended on "The Fair Penitent" (in which Dora had brought tears to her audience and an elegant stage suicide to herself) the sweet corpse picked itself up, walked down to the footlights and "went into" a comedy song that sent the audience into perfect hoots of laughter. The pale, tragic mien of the Fair Penitent brightened with piquant roughishness that was irresistible. The house was fascinated by her humor. Dora's managerial stood at the back of the auditorium and thanked the gods of chance for having thrown this versatile gold mine in his way.

This was the start of a successful engagement at Leeds—the beginning of a career that was to lead to the heights of fame in London and take Dora to within an inch of being Queen of England!

Dora took her career seriously—at its beginning, at least. She studied tragic parts; she experimented with the technique of her comedy, making her points swift and sure. Only with great study does the really great comedian achieve disarming ease and humor; Dora knew this. It may be taken for granted that all else was submerged to her art, since she changed her name to Mrs. Jordan that their "alliance" was officially "to keep," she claimed, "frivolous suitors at bay."

Time was to come when she would have given up everything to hold one suitor—but not now.

London came next, with Dora playing a variety of parts at the Drury Lane for the munificent sum of $20 a week. She caught on almost immediately with the public who welcomed her as an "irrepressible, almost irresponsible genius." Chief among her admirers was Sir Joshua Reynolds, who wrote of her Viola: "The performance combines feeling with sportive effect. She does as much by the music of her melancholy as by the music of her laughter."

But there was another admirer even more highly born than Sir Joshua—no less a personage than the Duke of Clarence, heir apparent to the throne of England. He was madly infatuated with Dora's beauty and high spirits, and in 1790 persuaded her to enter into a "formal alliance" with him. Such a connection could not long be kept from the public. Malignant rumors set about. The people were not really so much concerned over the immorality of the alliance as over their own dignity. Dora, they felt, was neglecting her art and them, because of her affair with the future William IV.

The enraged actress bitterly defied the attempts made upon her, but it is more than possible that there was weight to them. A beauty who can command a king is not likely to bow to his subjects.

Dora, who had by this time borne several children to the Duke of Clarence, felt assured of her morganatic position with the royal house. One evening prior to her performance in "The Devil to Pay," a mollification came from the duke that he and Dora Jordan "must their 'alliance' was officially ended. With her heart breaking, Dora went on the stage and carried off her performance capitally until she came to the "laughing scene" wherein she confessed that a conjurer had made her "laughing drunk." She could not go on. The hysteria of the scene reduced her to sobs, but a fellow player, with presence of mind interpolated: "Why, Nell, he hath made you crying drunx as well." The audience was thus not aware of the tragedy and left the theater more impressed than ever with the realism of Dora's art.

This was the beginning of the end, however. Dora was now past 50 and younger favorites were taking the place she had once held. Her eldest daughter had married a wastrel who dissipated most of the funds that the duke had provided for his erstwhile mistress and her children. Dora, in disgrace and terror of debtors' prison, fled to France, where she died, heartbroken and lonely. It is a irony of fate that the afterpiece of a delightful comedienne should have been tragedy, that the woman who had ruled her subjects with laughter should have died in tears.

BAER FACTS -:- BY 'BUGS' BAER

MR. HOOVER'S first official act as President was to give a dinner to seven hundred people.

Herbert still thinks he is feeding Belgians.

Having done things on a magnificent yardstick, it seems that Mr. Hoover cannot throttle his hospitality down to the vanishing point.

This supper was very different from the last administration. The menu consisted of sandwiches, punch, ice cream and coffee.

Which is quite a change from soda crackers and some New England boiled conversation.

We would not like to be the host to seven hundred people. If we ever thought that there would be a time when seven hundred people thought of eating at our house, we would send out some very insulting invitations.

However, Mr. Hoover is acclimated to this distressing hospitality. Having fed the world at large, he is accustomed to telling the waiter to bring in another boatload of sardines and an acre of mustard.

If Mr. Hoover is going to feed 'em seven hundred at a clip, we would like to grab the hat-checking privilege over at the White House.

We would imagine that the Hoover who would think less of quality and go in more for quantity.

That chef has plenty of work ahead of him for the next four years. When preparing each dinner he first must call up Herbert and ask:

"Who is it today, Mr. President, the army or the navy?"

Mr. Coolidge did plenty of entertaining. But he spread it out very thin, like golf leaf on the Capitol dome.

He dined Senators one at a time. He wasn't taking any chances of two of them starting a filibuster at his breakfast table.

With seven hundred people eating at the White House in a bunch, what is going to become of old Aunt Jemima and her one apple pie?

Every President has an aunt who bakes beautiful apple pies. When she can't give it away to her neighbors she sends it to the White House.

But Mr. Hoover's wholesale hospitality calls for an aunt who drives a pie wagon.

Looks as if the White House is operating on the ancient Egyptian food routine and that we are now in line for seven years of plenty.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

By TEMPLE MANNING

AMERICAN tourists who visit Barcelona this year during the great International Exposition, will find one of the most amusing features of Spain's chief city to be the Sardana, a form of amusement peculiar to Barcelona and its district, Catalonia. This is a queer native dance which the natives tread on the streets to the accompaniment of a municipal orchestra.

The dancing, a quaint measure utterly unlike its ballroom prototypes, goes on in different quarters of the city each night. The newspapers always tell where the Sardana is to be held, but the tourist who is in doubt has only to say "Sardana" to the first red-coated policeman he meets and that worthy guardian of the peace will promptly tell one's driver where to go.

The International Exposition, which opens May 15, will offer all sorts of amusements. The best orchestras and choral singers of Europe will be on hand, international athletic events will be held, and typical Spanish fiestas are being arranged.

For those who like to seek amusement off the beaten path, Barcelona is dotted with tiny music halls and theaters of the Parisian type, where native singers and dancers perform nightly, and where almost every kind of refreshment may be had, from powerful liquors, matured with heat, to mild sherry, called in Spain "distilled sunlight."

Picturesque restaurants, where the gourmet may find exotic and unusual dishes, are to be found everywhere.

ALICE JOYCE IN "THE GREEN GODDESS"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, March 11—Alice Joyce will have the unique experience of playing the part in "The Green Goddess" that she played seven years ago when George Arliss made it as a movie.

I don't think we need take that movie, seven years old, very seriously for neither Arliss nor the film were of much account. That is no reflection on the ability of Arliss as an actor. I wouldn't attempt to criticise him in that respect. It is only a criticism of the way they used to do pictures in the long ago.

Now, with the Vitaphone and the increased facilities for making better pictures, Warners have hopes that this melodrama will be as big a hit as it was when Arliss played it on the New York stage.

Remember Jetta Goudal? That was her first success. She played just a bit, but she did it so well that New York critics hailed her as a great discovery.

Al Green has been signed by Darryl Zanuck to direct.

ROBERT AMES, an actor whose youthful appearance belies his age, will have the comedy role in "Marianne," Marion Davies' next picture.

Bob Ames brought his wife here and decided to settle down in Hollywood and become a member of our film colony. He finds lots of company in Hollywood for each and every day we are seeing new actors settled in our Spanish bungalows.

Marion Davies has started to work and I mean work. It's the studio early in the morning until late at night. When that gal is making a picture there is nothing else on her mind. Maybe that is why she is a success. I have heard that concentration is the surest way to success. I am going to try it myself one of these days.

THE whispers that Florence Vidor is planning to retire from the screen will not materialize immediately. Miss Vidor has agreed to play opposite Emil Jannings in "The Concert," and that means she will linger in Hollywood for a few months at least. There has been much talk that she prefers to be just the wife of the famous violinist, Jascha Heifetz and not a star herself. But few actresses are really serious when they talk of retiring from the screen. They may think they mean it at the time, but the powerful magnet, the movies, draws them back. Lubitsch, who is back from Europe, is getting ready to direct "The Concert."

I COULD feel much happier about Eddie Horton getting good jobs if he didn't have to work so hard. His life is just one stage and screen performance after another. He walks from the studio to the theater and vice versa. Even when trying to steal a nap on the set at Warner's, and I realized how tired he must be. But then, work never killed anyone. It is good for the soul philosophers tell us.

Horton's soul ought to be in first-class condition. He has just agreed to make another version of "Time" it's for Educational, and it's a short reeler called "The Wrong Bed." He is to star or serve as original short reelers for Educational while he is on the job.

NAZIMOVA'S accent was never a barrier on the stage. In fact, I have heard it often said it was a valuable asset. Combined with her personality and her histronic talent. Edward Small believes the same rule should prove true on the talkies. He has arranged for her to come to Hollywood July 1 to make her first talkie, "The Red of Innocence."

No definite plans have been formulated for the release of Madame Nazimova's picture, but since Edward Small is releasing most of his pictures through Columbia it is probably a safe guess that this will not be an exception.

WHEN this is printed I shall be on the train on my way East. The last thing before I left I heard that George Fawcett had been signed by Warners to play with "Hearts in Exile" with Dolores Costello. I also heard that Dolores and John Barrymore are on their way back and are due to get here this month. Everyone will be eager to hear about that honeymoon, whether John is as sentimental as some people say or whether he makes a good husband. We're inquisitive, aren't we?

John Miljan and Richard Tucker were glimpsed on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot just previous to my departure. Both of them have roles in "The Green Ghost," a Rupert Julian production. Flora Finch, I saw at Warner Brothers and Irene Rich at the Fox Company. Freelancing is an exciting pastime for you never know where you will park the makeup box next.

WILLIAM FOX is due in Los Angeles in a day or two if he doesn't happen in town. He left New York suddenly without a word to anyone. It is reported he is coming here to look over the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and see what changes will be made. Do I hear chattering and see worried expressions? It is awful to be sold down the river, but Fox is not only a good business man, but he is a good picker of people, so I suspect more people will remain at M-G-M. than anyone believes at this time.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Adolphe Menjou and Katherine Carver exhibiting their favorite English Scotty dogs. Jay Gatsby and Red Fury Ruth Miller indulging in a soft drink between the acts of "Squawk." Mary Astor and Jimmy Hawks also going in for the same heavy drinking.

Mary Pickford calling at the Roosevelt Hotel. Paul Bern and Helen Chandler carrying on an animated conversation. Tom Moghan giving up a bridge game to go home and study lines. Jack Warner giving his old friends a thrill by riding down the boulevard in a yellow Rolls Royce. Grant Withers announcing that he has a car to sell. That's all today. See you this afternoon.

"Flo" Has Looked Over Some 56,000 Girls in All

New York, March 11—While most men have had more or less difficulty in persuading the one girl to stand at attention for matrimonial inspection, Florenz Ziegfeld has gone calmly along through life looking over 56,000, he estimates in his quest for beautiful show girls.

Ziegfeld has produced approximately 40 major musical shows for each of which he has selected about 70 girls. He estimates that he has picked the average of about one in twenty.

SALLY O'NEIL SCINTILLATES AT MODERN

Even the movies do have new ideas occasionally, and the result of one of them is "The Girl on the Barge," at the Modern and Beacon. Heroine Jean Hersholt assumes another disguise and how boiled Scotch barge captain, addicted to liquor and religion in about equal measure. Sally O'Neil has a real part to play as his daughter, "Erie," named after the canal.

And who should brave into the offing but Malcolm McGregor as a valiant tug captain, who teaches Erie to read and softens down her splendid stock of "cuss words." Incidentally of course, he falls in love with her, and there is a thrilling climax when a storm roars down on the barge at Hell Gate.

Film fans need hardly be told that Jean Hersholt is one of the best actors in shadow land, and that Miss O'Neil can do wonders with a part when she gets a real one. Rupert Hughes was responsible for the story, and Edward Sloman turned a deft hand to the direction.

HIGH PRAISE FOR 'MOTHER MACHREE'

Without sound of trumpets or beat of drums, one of the finest films in history steals quietly into Boston this week. Its title is "Mother Machree," and it is being shown at the Washington St. Olympia and the Fenway. Upon Chauncey Olcott's sentimental old play, John Ford, the director, has imposed all sorts of pictorial excellences. Ford is an Irishman, so the film parades fairies with its Irish spirit.

No praise is too high for the direction, and none too high for the titles, which are as good as, or better than, those in "The Big Parade." As far as acting goes, there are no flaws to be found. Belle Bennett strides out of her succession of rather sleight "mother" roles, and turns in a perfect performance.

Victor McLaglen, in the role of the Kilkenny giant, is at his best since his entry to films as Captain Flagg in "What Price Glory?" The late Ted McNamara adds still further lustre to his reputation. Neil Hamilton covers himself with glory. So do Pat Somerset, Eulalie Jensen, Constance Howard, Ethel Clayton, and every last player in the cast.

As filmed, "Mother Machree" is neither sentimental slush or melodrama. It is almost as good as a movie can be.

Belle Bennett

Lois Moran

Jansen Tinling, a newcomer who knows his business thoroughly. He puts Miss Moran through her paces better than ever before, and he even adds to the glory of Mr. O'Brien, despite the latter's fine performances in "Sunrise" and "East Side, West Side."

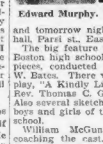
Needless to say this first run film is not one of when the Scollay need be ashined. It has a most unusual war story with plenty of turns and twists to keep the spectators guessing. And even if the heroine and hero are spies, they're not the usual Hollywood brand.

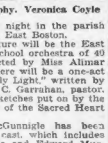
Vaudeville acts are also billed.

Talent Is Booked for Irish Concert

With a wealth of amateur and professional talent scheduled to appear, the annual Irish concert of the Sacred Heart Church, East Boston, promises to be an outstanding success.

The concert will be given tonight and tomorrow night in the parish hall, Paris st., East Boston.





Edward Murphy. Veronica Coyle

The big feature will be the East Boston high school orchestra of 40 pieces, conducted by Professor Walter Bates. There will be a one-act play, "A Kindly Light," written by Rev. Thomas C. Carrohan, pastor. Also several sketches put on by the boys and girls of the Sacred Heart school.

William McGunnigle has been coaching the cast, which includes Veronica Coyle, and Edward Murphy.

SCOLLAY SQ. HAS NEW TEAM OF STARS

Down at the Scollay Sq. Olympia this week, Hollywood's newest starring team makes it appearance. On the right, Pat Moran! On the left, George O'Brien! For author, none other than C. E. Montague, who turned out some of the best war stories ever written, and this one, called "True Heaven" for the films, is no exception!

Furthermore, the direction is in the hands of

Syrian Club Plans Show Next Month

The Syrian Catholic Young Men's Association will stage its first minstrel show at the Archbishop John J. Williams auditorium, West Brookline and Shawmut ave., on the evening of April 16. Members of the organization and members of the ladies' auxiliary will take leading parts in the production and several professional attractions have been engaged.

The committee includes Saleem Leon, chairman; George S. Habbad, Louis Yared, Alfred Scoff, Abraham Habesh and Mitchell Moloof. The show is directed by James J. Fleming, and Marion Thayer Hilts is in charge of the musical program.

"Cold Coming"

WHEN you feel that cold coming on—head if off with Bayer Aspirin. Almost everybody knows how these tablets break-up colds—but why not prevent them? Take a tablet or two at the very first sign of a cold and spare yourself a lot of inconvenience and suffering. Do the same when a headache threatens, or when you feel the least twinge of neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or similar pain. Bayer Aspirin is sure relief, as many have discovered. It is quite harmless, as physicians have long declared. It does not affect the heart, so you may take Bayer Aspirin freely. Use as a gargle for sore throat, to remove the infection. You can get the genuine at any drugstore. Bayer Aspirin. Bayer on every package and on each tablet identifies the genuine.

NO SUMMER DROP FOR CHAIN PROGRAMS

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE LISTENING PUBLIC will be able to tune in this summer on programs the equal both in quality and number to those sent out over the air in the winter months, according to Radio Retailing. Widespread recognition of its important place that radio holds in this country today has been instrumental in abolishing the summer slump in broadcasting. Sales figures of the big broadcasting chains indicate that hot weather programs this year will keep radio interest at a high pitch. Officials of the two leading broadcasting chains report that more than $23,000,000 will be invested by advertisers in chain programs during 1929. The National Broadcasting Company reports a sum in excess of $16,000,000 for chain programs for the current year, while Columbia's clients will spend close to $7,000,000 to entertain the radio public in 1929. Programs over the summer period this year will be virtually as numerous as in the other seasons of the year, according to plans announced. Previous years showed a sharp sag in programs in the summer months, the big feature being their retirement with the warm weather. That will not be the case this year, however, as sponsors of the most popular chain programs have definitely signified their intention of continuing their programs throughout the 12 months of the year. Here comes the Confidential Guide.

Lawyer and Daughter Wear Legion Ribbon

New York, March 11 (AP)—A New York lawyer and his daughter today were both entitled to wear the red ribbon of a chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France. Charles Robinson-Smith several years ago was decorated for his work with the Belgian relief commission and today the French government office announced that Gertrude Robinson-Smith, his daughter, had been made a chevalier.

Golden Rule Policy

President Hoover Rightfully Continues It in Mexico

President Hoover lost no time after entering the White House in letting Mexico and the world know that the Mexican policy of his predecessor for the last five years would be the Mexican policy of the new administration for the next four years.

This announcement took the form of action by President Hoover which completely upheld and continued in full force the Mexican policy of President Coolidge.

And the new President acted with such swiftness and firmness that the effect of what he did was felt forthwith throughout the length and breadth of Mexico.

Under what was the Coolidge policy, and is now the Hoover policy, the relations between the United States and Mexico are better today than they have ever been since the revolution that overthrew the Diaz Government.

A change of administration at Washington may have prompted the hope among certain Mexican generals of a change in American policy toward Mexico. Hence the revolt of a small part of the Mexican Army a few days ago.

But President Hoover was too well acquainted with the good fruits of the Coolidge policy toward Mexico and the good works of Ambassador Morrow to be taken unawares.

Furthermore, President Hoover has been too long in public life not to know that among nations, as among individuals, "action speaks louder than words."

Therefore, instead of issuing a new proclamation of purpose, or asking for time to study what was only an old problem newly presented, our new President kept in force the Coolidge policy and let that fact speak for itself on both sides of the Rio Grande.

As President Hoover's Ambassador to Mexico, Mr. Morrow is under instructions to deal only with the government of President Portes Gil as long as that government remains in power.

And to the end that the United States may not be used as a base of operations to overthrow whatever Mexican Government is in power, no shipment of arms and ammunition across the border will be permitted, except by the licensed agents of the Mexican Government to which an ambassador is accredited.

Such a policy as this follows not only the mandate of international law, but the counsel of "our interest guided by justice" which Washington commended to us in his farewell address.

To such a policy, sound in principle and neighborly in application, no right-minded citizen of Mexico or of the United States is justified in taking exception.

We are only doing to Mexico, in her hour of trial as we would have our next door neighbor do to us.

That is the Golden Rule—and there is no better policy for men or nations.

All Our Beliefs Concerning the Oyster Are Erroneous, Says Uncle Sam

For centuries the American oyster—ostrea edulis or ostrea virginica, as it is more formally known—has been held up to us as an example of human deportment. The oyster possesses to a greater degree than any other animal the virtue of keeping its mouth shut, or so it was said.

Politicians became statesmen merely by emulating the oyster. Fools were reputed to be sages for the same reason. Recently a waterproof watch was named after the bivalve.

Now, the United States Bureau of Fisheries announces that all our beliefs concerning the oyster are erroneous. The animal is a double-dyed deceiver, sailing under false colors

Dr. P. S. Galtsoff, of the biological laboratories, proved it by attaching levers and time clocks to 144 oysters. He found that in a twenty-four-hour day the oysters kept their faces stretched wide for an average of seventeen hours and five minutes.

Thus is another fallacy exposed and another idol proved to have feet of clay, so to speak.

This impostor not only keeps his mouth open more than two-thirds of the time, but does not utter a word while so doing. He adds nothing to the sum of human knowledge. He expresses no thought. He is good for nothing, except to eat, and then only for eight months of the year.

Let us hope that Uncle Sam will continue to expose such hypocrites.

It has already been shown that the bee is lazy, not busy, and we are beginning to doubt the wisdom of the owl and the cunning of the fox.

Indeed, if it were demonstrated that elephants are absent-minded, the information would not be astonishing!

Fashions for Men

Another attempt is under way to make men wear appropriate clothing. This time it is the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers who are sponsoring the campaign. From the association's convention in Atlantic City—home of the bathing beauties—the propaganda has been issued.

Men must—get that must—wear suits, shirts, socks and shoes to conform to their physical architecture and color scheme. Red-headed men with blue eyes should not wear the same color combinations proper for bald-headed men with black eyes. Medium stouts should not be draped as slim shorts are arrayed.

With all this we have no patience. The propaganda should be ignored. If it should be accepted, the next campaign would be made to compel men to dress according to their ages—and that would be unthinkable!

An Inspiring Idea

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE friends of popular education in the ideals of life are striving to have a telescope mounted in a dome to crown the great tower of the new State Capitol at Lincoln, Neb., which rises 400 feet above the pavement. There is something inspiring in this idea. Objection is made that the summit of a lofty tower would furnish too unstable a base for an astronomical telescope. But the heavy tower looks sufficiently strong and steady, while extreme absence of all motion would not be necessary for a telescope intended to serve such purposes as are set forth for this one. It is not intended for fine measurements or for delicate researches, but for popular intellectual stimulus and instruction. Everywhere exists the oft expressed desire of thousands to look at the heavens through a telescope. It is a desire that ought to be gratified whenever possible. It would be easy to combine a modest program of simple observations that would have real scientific and educational value with the use of the telescope and its accessories, under proper guidance, by hundreds who would obtain valuable mental incentives from it.

There are abundant occasions when such an observatory could be employed to supplement the work of the regular institutions especially in the direction of publicity for astronomical events and unexpected phenomena, such as the appearance of new comets or the occurrence of remarkable eclipses, or meteoric phenomena, or uncommon and significant appearances of any kind in the heavens.

A telescope is an instrument of power over the imagination. If a man but looks once in his life through a large telescope at objects sunken in the depths of space he is likely to receive an impression that will endure as long as he lives and become stronger with the lapse of time. He will never forget that once he saw, with all the strength of vision that human science could lend him, things hidden from humanity by the awful veil of distance.

There are times when a wonderful new star appears. The spectra of such stars as seen in the observatories are often of strange beauty and their significance is not hard to be explained to the layman. But he has no chance to see such things in the endowed observatories of the professional researchers in astronomy. The marvellous red "flames" of the solar protuberances can be easily viewed with a simple spectroscope attached to a good telescope. But good telescopes are not common possessions, nor is the slight skill required to manipulate them with these accessories widespread. But a public telescope, managed by a capable director, would supply this sort of object lessons in astronomy.

In a hundred ways such a telescope, so placed as that which they wish to have in the city of Lincoln, would deeply serve the intellectual interests of the citizens. It would be an honor to the city and to the State. It would help to convince some of our critical friends in Europe that there are no higher aims than those of young America.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Nature gives to every time and season some beauties of its own; and from morning to night, and from the cradle to the grave, is but a succession of changes so gentle and easy that we can scarcely mark their progress. —Dickens.

I think the first virtue is to restrain the tongue; he approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent, even though he is in the right. —Cato.

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero himself, who says there is not only an art, but an eloquence in it. —Allen.

The man who foolishly does me wrong, I will return to him the protection of my most ungrudging love; and the more evil comes from him, the more good shall go from me. —Buddha.

Bed is a bundle of paradoxes; we go to it with reluctance, yet we quit it with regret; we make up our minds every night to leave it early, but we make up our bodies every morning to keep it late. —Colton.

The opinions of the great body of the reading public is very materially influenced even by the unsupported assertions of those who assume a right to criticize. —Macaulay.

You can not force the growth of human life and civilization, any more than you can force these slow-growing trees. That is the economy of Almighty God, that all growth is slow growth. —Gaynor.

I love children. They do not prattle of yesterday; their interests are all of today and the tomorrows—I love children. —Standish.

The darkest hour in any man's life is when he sits down to plan how to get money without earning it.

Patience is a necessary ingredient of genius. —Disraeli.

A man without mirth is like a wagon without springs, in which one is caused disagreeably to jolt by every pebble over which it runs. —Beecher.

The better part of valor is discretion. —Shakespeare.

It is much easier to be critical than to be correct. —Disraeli.

Today is yesterday's pupil. —Franklin.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOME poor men went to see Benito Mussolini.

They wanted to talk over a plan with him for relieving the hardships of other working men.

They were sure that Mussolini would understand their problem because he had been so very poor himself before he became Dictator of Italy.

But Benito Mussolini did not wish to hear their plan.

He became quite indignant when they insisted on stating it.

He would attend to all such problems himself when he saw fit, and not before.

Did they not know who he was?

"I AM MUSSOLINI" he announced haughtily.

Which may go over big with Italian Fascists—but not for long.

When folks get to that "I AM" stage the end is near.

In the virile vernacular of the Wild West, "that big boy is breeding a scab on his nose."

Some of these days fate is just going to lean down lazily and sideswipe him into the ranks of the Who was Who's.

"I AM MUSSOLINI!" he will protest indignantly.

"NO YOU AIN'T!" fate will say. And Benito will become just another busted record.

IAMITIS—that's Mussolini's disease.

It is the commonest and most fatal of all human diseases.

It lies in wait for anyone who attains a little authority.

Very little authority is needed to produce a most virulent case of IAMITIS.

I have seen floor-walkers so inflated with IAMITIS that they would pop at the slightest pressure. Almost all parents have IAMITIS.

They do not suffer from such exaggerated cases as grandpa and gramma did, thanks to the well-known revolt of the younger generation. But even at that most of them manage to run up a pretty fair temperature.

"It's funny, before becoming poppas or mommas they may have been a couple of nit wits that you wouldn't trust to sift the ashes.

But once let them give birth and Benito has nothing on them.

They are immediately all smoked up with IAMITIS.

"I don't wanna do that! Why've I gotta?" whine- the infant.

"Don't ask questions, young man," snaps Poppa. "I have said so. That's enough."

It isn't enough. No man on earth, whether it be Mussolini or just a plain papa, is wise or valuable enough to issue mandates without explanations.

"I AM MUSSOLINI?" or "I AM PAPA!" is no answer to any question, however trivial.

Even God does not put on airs like that. He lets us have our say—all the say we want. And then watches quietly while we eat our words.

Floor-walkers, dictators, parents aren't the only ones who have IAMITIS.

Successful females with careers —oh, boy!

Congressmen would all suffer fatal of all human diseases.

It lies in wait for anyone who attains a little authority.

Very little authority is needed to produce a most virulent case of IAMITIS.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 11—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early with Meredith Nicholson, the Hoosier councilman, to wander through the Bowery, which has become a custom when he comes to town, and we bought a green, pink and yellow hook-on tie from a pushcart to send to Kin Hubbard.

Then to a horologist with my desk clock which began merrily to run backward, and he tells me there are still old time clock winders in New York who go to private homes weekly to wind clocks. So walking about and picked up a lady's purse and returned it, but received scant thanks.

In the evening with Tom and Marie Hogg, from San Antonio, and Will Rogers to Diny Moore's for corn beef and cabbage, and Will could eat but little for people who came over to inquire if he remembered them when he was playing Walla Walla or Oshkosh, and he remembered them all, the liar. To bed.

NEW YORK'S doorman are becoming so important they are being apotheosized in pen and ink drawings in fashionable periodicals. From a simple uniform of blue with cap to match, they have progressed to gorgeous costumes, caparisoned in gold and silver, and patent leather top boots.

Some uniforms cost $500. It has been found a flossy doorman is as important as a glittering window display. Jewelry and especially shops, perfume parlors and dress-making establishments discovered women adore the queenly feeling of attention by a major domo in all his splendor.

The doorman is no petty grubber these days. With salaries as high as $40 a week and tips often doubling that, he has almost left the glorified head waiter in the well known shade. Most of them are husky young Celts, fine of figure and full of blarney.

They stand as a symbol of class and distinction, and because they have an unerring instinct for counterfeit humanity it becomes highly important in New York to know them. On Broadway their dress is a little more garish—especially in front of movie palaces.

Here they duke it up with high furry headgear with chin straps, but over eastward they have that dignified magnificence of an English butler. And they rule their portals as Czars.

A NEW hotel on an upper strip of one of the avenues tried to wean a well known doorman—a fellow who knew all the Onderdoncks and Vanglits personally—from another hotel in the neighborhood. A spirited bidding began, and in the end the new hotel got him at a salary that came within a small sum of equaling that of the managing director. Every delicatessen and sandwich parlor of importance now has its curbstone grand nowsit for the carriage trade.

AND the page boys, not much bigger than Roger Wolfe Kahn, with tambourine caps and pouter pigeon-cut uniforms in the afternoon tea rooms rate a few lires. They have become a striking part of the scene. Hub-dubbery with their costumes of flaming red, lavender, snow white and green. Many have been imported from the swank establishments of London and Paris. And are considered "cute" as everything.

IN the ultra hotels the elevator operators change to evening costumes at six o'clock. At the Ritz they wear braided tail coats, with knee length silk pantaloons, black silk long stockings and silver buckled pumps and to ride with them and chew gum is a perfect circus.

A NEWSPAPER columnist friend —you have to mix up with all sorts in this kind of work—just asked me what had become of those middle-aged elevator operators who wore derby hats, puffed a pipe on duty, sat on a high stool upon which to rest when duties were not rushing.

FROM a bank's essay on thrift: "Saving requires intelligence. The penny wise and pound foolish are like those whose idea of thrift is in saving old strings, rubber bands, corks and letter clips. They get nowhere."

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND.

ALL women desire a successful man. This is not because all women are mercenary, or because they look upon a successful man as a Santa Claus, who will shower jewels and sables upon them.

It is not the dollars that have followed in the wake of Lindy's flying feats that have made him America's Prince Charming. It is not even his tooth-powder smile and blond beauty — though that helps some.

It is because he DID the brave, the daring, the glorious thing. Because he GOT THERE! And got there, first!

When the knights old went forth to do battle or to win tournaments it was not the knight, but the woman who pinned her favor upon his sleeve, who got the biggest thrill out of his triumphal return.

A woman's charms for a man are sweetness, beauty, tenderness, understanding and lovableness—her passive qualities.

But a man's charm for women are his strength, his ability and his power to conquer and achieve. His go-getting qualities. His ability to DO things—whether it's winning a football match, a scholarship, a Carnegie medal or a fortune in Wall Street.

A man often loves a woman whose stupidity he despises, and whose laziness he abhors. He loves her because she is kissable and cuddly, or because she is beautiful and alluring, or because she is tender and soothing.

Success doesn't get a woman married. Any-body can get any man, anyway. A successful woman is often a lonely woman, because, while she may need her brains and ability, academically no man ever loved a woman for her achievements.

But success is a halo that glorifies a man in a woman's eyes ever when it proves only that he has more brute power. And most of man's achievements in this world have been the result of his desire to glorify and justify himself in the eyes of some woman.

A successful man, be he fat or bald or old or vulgar or ignorant, is never without the adoration of women.

Boston American's Policies For Boston-New England

FOR BOSTON:

1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

FOR NEW ENGLAND:

1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.
